IN THE LIGHT OF EXPERIENCE

Bobby, waiting to walk to the corner of the hall with his father as he did every morning, decided at last not to wait for the end of the discussion that seemed somehow to concern him. So he stole out of the half-open front door of the big apartment building. The argument went on in his absence. "I don't see why you have the country crane again," Bobby's mother said. "I don't want to give up this comfortable flat and all my social affairs to bury myself in the woods." "It isn't the woods," Bobby's father said, impatiently. "But, of course, if you won't, that's all there is to it. We can get the house cheap now and Bobby needs a place to play. The poor little chap looks like a celery plant already." Bobby: "Where was the boy?" "Come on," Bobby's father said, for getting his grievance. "We'll find him out in the hall. He loves those red-and-white tiles."

Out in the hall a door opened and a woman in a gorgeous kimono stooped to pick up the morning paper. "You are looking for your child?" she asked, coldly. "He was here a little while ago but he persisted in making my baby by singing, and I told him to run away." "He is so tiny!" cried the culprit's mother.

"The smaller the boy the bigger the noise!" You might ask the elevator boy. Bobby's father rang the elevator bell. "Why, yes, sir, I seen him awhile ago," the elevator boy said. "He wanted to know would I play tiger and I told him to go to his ma. You might ask the janitor."

"Why, sure, the little feller was here," the janitor said. "Twas sorry I was to tell him not to play on the stairs, but there's so many to complain, sir, and noises echoes a lot. You might ask the young lady in the office, sir."

The young woman had noticed him, he looked so pretty in his khaki, and she had told him to run out in the courtyard because she could not bear what people said over the phone when he sang so loud. They might ask the downstairs janitor. The downstairs janitor looked up from the step he was washing. "Ach, yes, I hat saw your boy, yet," he said. "He was digging holes in main court and I send him away mit hollering at him. He is run out in der street yet."

"In the road! Oh, Tom!" Bobby's mother was very white and tense lines showed about his father's mouth. Bobby was so tiny to be alone in such a wide, rushing world! They walked far, looking for a policeman, and finally found one on their return. Bobby's mother seized him by the arm, eagerly. "Oh, where's Bobby?" she cried. "You have seen my little boy, haven't you? In a khaki suit? I told him never—"

"Sure, I seen him some time gone. He was after playing ball with stones in the road, and I says for him to play on the walk. I says, for fear of automobiles. There's so many at this now." "Where did he go then?" asked Bobby's father. "You didn't let him go far, surely?" "An' why not?" the officer said, coolly. "I was thinkin' he lived near by an' he wasn't cryin'. It's orders to stop the little wans what's cryin'. Besides, the laddy took him along."

DISAPPEARING MOTHER OF BABY

Three Weeks—The Baby, the Mother, the Vegetation
The three systems—the baby, the mother and the vegetation—stand in forming this feature. When the necessary material is present the greatest amount of positiveness or firmness is to be found. Where the muscular system is supreme in its structure the art side of character is indicated. When vigorous life is predominant the character lacks firmness and is given to ease and sociability or gluttony.

The oval chin announces a tall, for some form of art. The square or boy chin suggests positive characteristics together with conscientiousness, order, precision, mechanical and scientific tastes and moral courage.

When constitutional vigor is wanting the chin is either sharp or pointed or narrow and receding. Great constitutional vigor is indicated by the broad and square chin, which also denotes thoroughness, moral principle and reliability.

The position of the chin also reveals character. There are three, according to Stanton—viz., the perpendicular, the receding and the projecting. If the chin recedes, greatly it denotes one form of weakness; if it projects greatly it announces another form of deficiency. The receding chin indicates firmness and perseverance, the projecting is persevering, but in one way only—saving money.

The perpendicular chin has been styled the normal type. A great majority of actors and actresses and authors and orators have a dipple in the chin which has always been associated with an artistic temperament. However, it does not follow that because the chin is dimpled artistic talent is present. The famous Gibson girl is said to have an ideal chin for the American beauty.

Children's Catch Mite.
Moles and mice may make excellent gardeners, but they are not good gardeners. An accomplished specialist, known to perfection the seeds of many plants and his mousing had often tried in vain to show him of his mousing.

"This time I have him," the artist remarked to a party of friends at the dining table. And he showed them a packet containing the dried remains of a mousing. "He then sent for the gardener."

"You know 'em best," Mouson was heard to say. The gardener carefully scrutinized the packet. "Why, no!" he said, at last. "They are the seeds of the Polyp fungus, a very rare tropical plant." "How long will they be coming up?" Mouson asked, with a chuckle of suppressed merriment. "About a fortnight," was the reply. Two weeks later the guests were again assembled at Mouson's table and after dinner the gardener was announced. "M. Mouson," the man said, "the seed has just come up."

Boy Assured Worth by Schoolboy

How would the schoolboy of today enjoy wearing early-fashioned coats, knee breeches or red stockings and blue plaid breeches? There was only a part of the boy appeared when he schoolboys of two centuries ago. There were few public schools in those early days, and the boys made themselves "pay school" were very particular about their apparel.

A single example will give a good idea of the contents of one small trunk of a boy leaving home for school. A list about 18 years old, named John Livingston, was sent from New York to school in New England in the latter part of the sixteenth century. An account of his new linen and clothes has been preserved. It reads thus, in the old spelling:

- 1. 2 Pair new shirts.
- 2. Pair new hose.
- 3. Green Cravats.
- 4. Cravats with Lace.
- 5. Stripes Waincoats with black buttons.
- 1. Flowered Waincoats.
- 2. New seastrig britches.
- 3. Gray hat with a black ribbon.
- 1. Doublet black buttons.
- 1. Doublet colored buttons.
- 2. Pair gold buttons.
- 2. Pair of new his Clothes.
- 2. Pair white Stockings.
- 1. Pair Blue Stockings.
- 1. Pair Blue Stockings.
- 2. White Handkerchiefs.
- 2. Speshel Handkerchiefs.
- 3. Pair Gloves.
- 1. Staff Coat with black buttons.
- 1. Cloth Coat.
- 1. Pair Blue plush britches.
- 1. Pair Blue britches.
- 1. Pair new Shoes.

"Cobwebs" was a heavy linen. Other schoolboys of that date had deerskin breeches. Little boys, then as soon as they could walk, were dressed precisely like their fathers—doublets, which were worn under jackets, and leather knee-breeches, leather belts and knit caps.—Philadelphia Record.

The Animals Meet Honey.
The following notes in aid to have been sent on by a party of the mayor in a small party in the upper Province:
"Meeting that the young people of the parish are accustomed to assemble every Sunday after noon to dinner, and that the men which they make brightest the best of the men, and other domestic animals of the village, and that the result is a hilarious array of evidence to be given by the honey which the domestic animals take their repose."

Special Test of Timber.
An example of the progress of the science of forestry in this country is furnished by the co-operation now arranged between the University of Idaho and the United States Forest Service for testing the timber growth in the State of Idaho. The data will be specially directed to determine the fitness of these timbers for use as bridge stringers, railroad ties and sawing stocks.

Apprentice of Different Colors.
To say that anything is "an apple" is to make an error of not considerable magnitude. There are three colors of apples, viz., red, yellow and green. There is also a red apple, sometimes called a "Cortland" apple. Further, many red apples are yellow or white.

Thomas's Possible Answer.
When the forest ranger heard that Thomas lay on his deathbed, a Catholic friend called to make inquiry regarding his soul. "Henry," he said, anxiously, "have you made your peace with God?" "John," replied the dying naturalist, in a rattling way, "I didn't know that God and myself had quarreled!"
