THREE IS NO PLACE LIKE IT

"Home!" said Mrs. Lummy. "Home at last!" She opened one of the long-closed shutters and made a careful examination of the house to her right. "The Blumens have a new pair of curtains in their upstairs hall; they have had the floor of their place painted and another brick has fallen out of their chimney."

"Poor devil!" said Mr. Lummy from behind his coat of tan. "They couldn't go away."

Mrs. Lummy opened another shutter and made a careful examination of the house to her left. "Eh!" she said.

"Well!" said Mr. Lummy, with impatience. "Somebody has bought a new lawnmower!" she exclaimed, with a gasp. "Was, well!" said Mr. Lummy bitterly. "A new garden hose?"

"Somebody," said Mr. Lummy more bitter than before, "is getting quite shy in their old age."

Mrs. Lummy closed the shutter with an emphasis of marked displeasure and, sitting down with a good comfortable bounce, she opened her mouth and yawned to a frightful extent.

"O-o-o-o!" she yawned, making the exclamation a staccato one by clapping her hand on and off her mouth with every evidence of enjoyment. "but it's good to be home!"

"Yes," said Mr. Lummy fretfully, "but you needn't yawn so blessed much!"

"William Lummy!" she cried with spirit. "I'll give you to understand that I shall yawn all I please in my own house. Why, there have been times this summer when I have nearly died because I couldn't yawn when I felt it. O-o-o-o!" she yawned again, closing her eyes and using her right hand, and "O-o-o-o!" she repeated with her left hand. She opened her eyes to see how he was taking it and cried at once:

"William Lummy!"

"Well!" growled that gentleman. "Here I am."

She merely looked at him, all eyes and indignation.

"Well!" he cried again, raising his voice a few notes. "What is it?"

"You know right well what it is!" she cried.

"No worse than your yawning!" he cried back.

"William Lummy, you take your foot off that chair then, because I can't sit down!"

"All right; then I shall put my foot on the chair all I want to."

"No, you won't!"

"Yes, I shall!"

"No, you won't!"

"Yes, I shall!"

"No, you won't!"

"Yes, I shall!"

And with an impudent look Mr. Lummy threw his other foot upon a chair and gazed at his wife in such a tantalizing way that she arose to her feet, her back comb trembling with indignation and enjoying herself immensely.

"William Lummy!" said she, "for the last time! You will either take your feet off those chairs or else you will take the consequences!"

And her eyes flashed so that the back of William's neck ceased to exert a pressure against his collar and he faintly grumbled.

"Well, if you'll stop yawning—"

"I shall stop yawning, or I shall not stop yawning, just as I please, but if you—"

Slowly and reluctantly Mr. Lummy's feet came out of their respective chairs.

"There!" cried Mrs. Lummy, beaming. "Now I'll make you a lemonade for dinner!"

She leaned over, embraced him fondly and with the light of victory still in her eyes she peered in the door on her way to the kitchen and turned around, saying:

"Isn't it good to be home again!"

Legend of Magpie and Robin.
The peasants of France, in accordance with a tradition, pierce the head of a magpie with a thorn whenever they catch one. According to the French legend, after Jesus had been nailed to the cross two birds alighted on the extended arms of the instrument of death. One was a magpie with a beautiful argentite on its head and a long waving tail, then the handsomest of birds but the wickedest, chirping insult at the suffering Jesus. The other bird was a modest little bird with gray plumage, which approached the cross timidly, uttering cries of grief. With its beak it tried to pluck away one of the thorns. A single drop of the blood fell on the plucking little gray bird and gave the robin rebirth.

Austrian Bureaucracy.
Austrian bureaucracy, especially in matters connected with the collection of taxes, is often extraordinarily pedantic. In a large village in lower Austria there died last November a brick layer named Stephan Schmidt. A few days ago his family received an official letter from the district tax office addressed to Herr Stephan Schmidt and reading as follows:

"You are hereby officially notified that on account of your death taxes for 1938 have been withheld."
