

A MOUNTAIN AIR CURE.

Summer and Winter Alternates Daily at St. Moritz.

The summer season at St. Moritz, a health resort high among the Alps, is short—a scant two months—when the temperature is mild. But even in August snow sometimes falls in the valley at night. The sun is the life of St. Moritz. The moment it appears over the mountain tops it assails the heat and the cold of night like a devouring flame. It sends the mercury in the thermometer chasing up the scale twenty degrees in an hour. Where there had been snow at midnight is now in lawn dresses and men in cool jackets are lounging about at noon. They are late in the afternoon come down behind a mountain peak. Instantly a chill shivers through the valley and it is winter again.

There are springs at St. Moritz and baths, but they are not patronized with the regularity of lowland resorts. The air is a better cure than the water. Mountain climbing is more beneficial to the muscles than massage.

Long drives through the valley excursions to glaciers and diligence journeys over the passes take the place of doctors. Outdoor life is the cure of St. Moritz.—Everybody's.

Strange Food for Humans.

According to a writer in the Scientific American, perhaps the most singular food for human beings is the larvae of a fly which is common in parts of California. This insect is found in such vast quantities in Lake Mono that it is washed upon the shores in vast quantities and can be collected by bushels. The water of Mono is very singular, seemingly heavy and smooth like oil, so much so that it resists ordinary wind and refuses to become ruffled. When the larvae begin to appear Indians gather from far and near and scrape them up, place the wormlike creatures on cloth and racks in the sun, and by their weight they are beaten up and husked. The food, which has been husked, is then eaten. The larvae are collected at this time by the Indians. The larvae are soon grown fat in the husk.

We Operate a Shoe Factory on a small scale.

Each of the machines on this Goodyear Repair Outfit is a counterpart of the original used in the manufacturing of Goodyear Welt Shoes, the stitcher, trimmer, scorer, edger, buffer, polisher and finisher. Hence we can sew back in the old holes and make the shoes same as new. Let us show you samples of our whole bottom work. Home phone 1909

If we sold gas in packages, and delivered it to you by horse and wagon, you would count the packages. We are selling gas to you by the cubic foot, and the scales are in the cellar. Count the cubic feet by daily reading of your meter. You little realize how much satisfaction you will get from the knowledge of just how and when you used the gas.
