The Right Of Way.

Mr. Bolton had purchased himself a farm, and taken possession. While examining the premises before deciding to buy, he had observed a light wagon moving along on the extreme south edge of the tract of land included in his mark. On the morning that followed their arrival, while Mr. Bolton stood conversing with a farm-hand who had been on the place under the former owner, he observed the same vehicle again passing across the portion of his land referred to.

"Whose wagon is that, Ben?" he asked.

"It is Mr Halpin's was replied Halpin, who owns the next farm."

"Yes sir."

"He takes a liberty with my premises that I would not like to take with his," said Mr Bolton.

"Verily, some men have the impudence of old Nick himself!"

"They always go by that road," replied Ben. "at least, it has been so ever since I have worked on the farm. I think I once heard Mr Jenkins, from whom you bought tell somebody that Mr you are so fond of them. If you palate I've made some curds. I don't think I shall think of curds and said a good deal in favor of the cream, that I promise myself much pleasure having such good neighbors."

"I don't think much of her husband," returned Mr. Bolton coldly.

"Have you done as I directed?" said Mr Bolton with knit brows, on meeting Ben, some time afterwards, returning from the left part of the farm where he had left him.

"Yes, sir," was the answer of Ben.

"What did you do with the gate?"

"I threw it in the field as you told me."

"You didn't break it?"

"No, sir."

"Very well."

"There'll be trouble, Mr. Bolton," said Ben.

"How do you know?"

"Mr. Halpin's a very determined man."

"So am I," replied Mr. Bolton.

As Mr. Bolton turned from the Ben, he saw Mr. Dix, who owned another farm that adjoined his, were talking a few hours ago.

"About Halpin's right of way, you mean?"

Forcing a smile into his face, he met his neighbor with a pleasant greeting.

"You will excuse me," said Mr. Dix after a few words had passed between them, "for a liberty I am about to take. I saw your man, a little while ago, closing up the gate that opens from your farm into Mr Halpin's."

"Well!" Mr. Bolton's brows contracted heavily.

"Are you aware that this farm has the right of way through yours?"

"No, sir."

"Such, however, let me assure you, is the case, Mr. Halpin has no other avenue to the public road."

"That's his misfortune, but it gives him no license to trespass on my property."

"Pardon me for saying that in this you are in error," returned the other. "Originally both farms were in one; that was subsequent to the sale with a right of way across south edge of your premises. But this."

"There is no such concession in the deed I hold," said Bolton.

"If you will take the trouble to make an examination in the clerk's office in the county court, you'll find it to be as I state."

"I don't care anything about it," Bolton, "I look only to how it is now."

"Just try some of that butter. It is delicious," said Mrs. Bolton, soon after they were seated at the dinner table that day.

"I don't care about butter at dinner-time," replied Mr Bolton coldly.

"But just try some of this. I want you to taste it," urged his wife. "Its flavor is delightful. Halpin, who owns the next farm, must go over and see Mrs. Halpin's dairy."

"Isn't it very fine?" said his wife, as she saw him place it to his lips.

"Yes, it's good butter," replied Mr Bolton, very good butter. "Though it was far from tasting pleasant to him."

"It's more than very good," said Mrs. Bolton, impatiently. "What has come over you?" But Mr Jenkins, from whom you bought a little while, and I'll give you something to quicken your palate. I've made some curds. If you don't think I shall think of curds and said a good deal in favor of the cream, that I promise myself much pleasure having such good neighbors."

"Well neighbor," said the former in a tone of mild persuasion, "I hope you have thought better of the matter about which we were talking a few hours ago."

"About Halpin's right of way, you mean?"

Yes.

He has no right to trespass on my premises," said he sternly.

For the last mile of the way, on Mr. Bolton's return, there had been a gentleman riding along in advance of Mr. Bolton, and as the horse of the latter made a little speed, he gained on him slowly, until, just as he reached the point where the road leading to his farm left the turnpike, he came up with him.

"Mr. Bolton, I believe," said the gentleman, smiling, as both, in turning into the narrow lane, came up side by side.

"That is my name," was replied.

"And mine is Halpin," returned the other, offering his hand.

"You have a beautiful farm. One of the finest in the neighborhood," said Mr. Halpin.

"Yes, it is choice land."

"You know that through some contrivance, my right of way to the public road is across the south edge of your premises. But we will talk of that some other

The sincere sympathy of the many friends will be extended to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hoey of Delevan St., on the death of their only daughter Marie. The funeral was held at St. Mary's church last Friday morning.

Solemn high mass will be celebrated Sunday at the 10:30 mass, special music will be rendered for the occasion.

The monthly collection will be taken up at the masses on Sunday. The diagram of the pew rents will also appear on Sunday.

High mass was celebrated on Tuesday morning for the members of the women's society. Br. 62 L. C. B. A. will meet next Thursday evening. The funeral of August Nunn who died last Wednesday was held last Saturday at 8:30 from his home 349 Brown St. and at 9 o'clock from the church. Mr. Nunn was 44 years old, and leaves beside his wife, two sons and one daughter, one brother and three sisters.

Monday afternoon and evening standing room in the Cook Opera House will be in active demand. Manager J. H. Moore says so. He knows. All the people, or nearly all the people who gave up worldly pleasures during Lent will at some time during the week, either afternoon or evening, see the big Easter vaudeville bill prepared for them. First on the program is Laddie Cliff, the English boy comedian and grotesque dancer. Next "La Pette Revue," singing by a quintette of voices. The Hawaiian Trio, in native singing and instrumental solos. Mr. Hymack, the Chameleon comedian, the fellow who changes his gloves and other sartorial adornments in full view of the audience. Hugh Lloyd, the Australian bounding rope performer; Work & Ower, the European eccentric acrobats; the Kinsons, in a musical oddity; the Rooney sisters, daughter of the once noted Irish comedian Pat Rooney, in songs and dances; and the Mooreoscope pictures.

When Mr. Halpin, some weeks afterwards, made reference to the right of way across Mr. Bolton's land, and asked if he would sell him a narrow strip on the south edge of his farm, to be fenced off for a road, the latter said:

"No, Mr. Halpin, I will not sell you the land; but as it is of little or no value to me, I will cheerfully vacate it for a road, if you are willing to run the fence."

Ever after, when disposed to act from a first angry impulse, Mr Bolton's thoughts would turn to this right-of-way question, and he would become cool and rational in a moment.

The funeral of Richard J. McCabe who died suddenly last week was held from his residence in State St. with services at the Holy Family church at 9:30 and was largely attended. Rev. Patrick McArdle conducted the services.

The "Truth" which is considered by many of the ablest American and English critics to be the best play ever written by Clyde Fitch, will be presented at the Baker Theatre by Miss Jessie Bonstelle and her company during the second last week of their engagement. This play was first produced in Cleveland three years ago and was later played at the Criterion and Lyceum theaters in New York by Clara Bloodgood who created the part of Becky Warder, the woman who learns to respect the truth after a lifetime of lies.
