

Of Interest to Women

An Inexpensive Home-Made Pasteurizing System for Sterilizing Milk Supply Can be Conducted at Home—Method is Very Simple and Insures Clean Milk for the Baby.

Dirty milk or milk that is the least bit sour will often throw a child into a fever. Convulsions are not uncommon with delicate children when milk has not been as it should be a little carelessness or a little delay may mean a house robbed of its shine and the little voice that for a few short months only was there to cheer it. The only way avoiding sanitary modes of thinking to be that the milk is in the right condition for the baby is to pasteurize it. It can be done at home. The method is a simple one.

The bottle of milk that is to be pasteurized should be placed in a case of water the water extending about three-fourths of the way up the bottle. The top of which should be either corked off or else loose. Then the water in the case should be brought to a boil. As soon as the bubbles begin to rise the can of water with the bottle in it should be taken from the stove and the milk and water allowed to cool in the same position in which they were on the stove. When the milk should be placed on the ready for use.

The cry of tenement mothers that they cannot afford ice and that they have no ice box has been answered by the Chicago Tribune says, by a health department, the members of which have designed an icebox which can be made for practically nothing and operated for less than 3 cents a day.

Secure an ordinary wooden box 18 by 18 inches, with a depth of 11 inches, run their instructions. The bottom of the box place a substantial layer of sand. On top set a tin pan 14 or 15 inches in diameter and high enough to hold a

NOTE: OFF VIALS SELLERS

EVALUATION OF BROWN MILK
BOTTLE OF MILK
(A) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(B) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(C) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(D) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(E) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(F) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(G) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(H) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(I) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(J) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(K) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(L) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(M) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(N) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(O) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(P) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(Q) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(R) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(S) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(T) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(U) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(V) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(W) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(X) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(Y) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK
(Z) IS A BOTTLE OF MILK

The design shows a type of health brace that has become very popular with the society dames of Paris where an advanced group of women are carrying on a crusade for its universal adoption.

Removing Iron Rust. Wherever the ordinary hooks and eyes have been used on light-colored frocks there is almost sure to be spots of iron rust as a result. The very first thing to do is to rip off the fasteners and get the rustless kind.

Alexandra's Perpetual Youth. There is not the slightest loss of freshness in Queen Alexandra's figure. Walking with the Dowager Empress of Russia she appears as youthful as a schoolgirl. Her step is light, her carriage erect and her form lithe and graceful.

Russian Toffee. Half a pound of raw sugar, half a tin of condensed milk, quarter of a pound of butter. Stir for quarter of an hour after it begins to boil.

Notes and Comment

Of Interest to Women Readers

NEW KITCHEN CABINET.

Bread, Cake, Spices and Flour All in Same Place in this One.

In household affairs as well as in business the best results are obtained where there is a minimum of lost energy. Systems can be as carefully followed in the kitchen as in the counting house, and a good cook never runs around in circles looking for a lost ingredient while the cake burns. In these days of handy devices, however, there is no excuse for losing anything. For use in the kitchen two Chicago men have designed a cabinet which keeps a variety of articles at the cook's elbow and saves her the necessity of hunting for them. The top of the cabinet, which is laid out to stand on the floor, is divided into a series of small compartments, each with a separate lid or spica. Below this is another compartment, a trifle larger for miscellaneous articles. Then comes a still larger space for cakes (the biggest space of all for bread and a drawer with a semi-circular bottom for flour). Boston Post.

Saves Cook Worry

Art in the Country Home.

We neglect the corners of our rooms too much. Fine effects can be secured by hanging long and narrow pictures there. Try this and see if I am not right. Corners are excellent places for upright flower pieces.

Great care must be taken to hang pictures covered with glass in positions where the light will not strike them in such a manner as to cause reflections, as from a mirror. All pictures under glass are most effective on walls which do not face windows.

Never buy a picture that doesn't please you because a friend urges you to do so. You are buying for yourself; there let your own taste decide the matter. You may not have what is called "a cultivated taste" but you can tell when a picture pleases you as well as if you had all the cultivation in the world and that's the criterion for the purchaser to judge a picture by. Does it please? A picture need not be expensive to be good. Really fine ones can be bought cheaply.

A good picture has as much of a mission in the family as a good book. Books, pictures, music and flowers are the four apostles of the gospel of the beautiful in the home. From 'The Country House Interior' by Eben F. Rexford.

THE LATEST HEALTH CORSET.

The design shows a type of health brace that has become very popular with the society dames of Paris where an advanced group of women are carrying on a crusade for its universal adoption.

Removing Iron Rust. Wherever the ordinary hooks and eyes have been used on light-colored frocks there is almost sure to be spots of iron rust as a result. The very first thing to do is to rip off the fasteners and get the rustless kind.

Alexandra's Perpetual Youth. There is not the slightest loss of freshness in Queen Alexandra's figure. Walking with the Dowager Empress of Russia she appears as youthful as a schoolgirl.

Russian Toffee. Half a pound of raw sugar, half a tin of condensed milk, quarter of a pound of butter. Stir for quarter of an hour after it begins to boil.

Culture in Cambridge. There is a famous "mothers' club" in Cambridge. Most of the members belong (by proxy) to the faculty of Harvard College. Some years ago a member met another member the morning after a meeting and asked about it, not having been present.

Ordinary fine salt should be kept on every kitchen washstand since it is splendid in cleaning stains from the hands.

A Reward Withheld

With troubled eyes and a strange feeling of dissatisfaction, James Houston looked upon the small unhappy group by his bedside. His three children, Mary, aged 12, Alice, 10, and little Donald, only 7, were sulkingly withstanding the gracious advances of his wife Gertrude, their new mamma. Since her homecoming, a year back, she was untiring in her effort, to win these childish hearts, but they steadily withheld the love which they felt belonged only to their pretentious mother, who had left them for a happier world.

Gertrude Houston's lovely eyes filled with pain and disappointment and she left the little group and went to her husband's side. Nurse Spencer took the children out, and she looked wistfully after them, then, turning to her husband with a sigh.

"It seems like a hopeless task I never wanted anything so much as the affection of these little ones, and yet I can't seem to touch the right chord at all. If they only knew how much I have given up for them, how many years of lonely weariness I endured, do you think they would ever understand?"

He answered with a sigh and a look of tenderest devotion. "Gertrude, no one can withstand you long. Don't give up, dear."

A year had passed and sadness filled the Houston home. Mr. Houston's health had been rapidly falling, and the last hope was a serious operation, and the result of this was feared.

They were in the library, the same old constant existed between Gertrude and her little charges, and the same sweet patience in the woman's face. She left the room to give some orders, and the father called the children to him and in a kind, earnest voice, pleaded for their hearts for his wife.

"My dear children this may be the last time we will be together. During the past year I have watched with pain the earnest efforts of your mother to gain your love and your steadfast repulse. Why is it if you cannot give her even a little affection? Is she not kind to you? Does she not do everything to please you? Dress you dolls? Help you with your lessons? Fix your kites and your train of cars? What is it? Do you dislike her? If I should not come back to you she would care for you with the same loving attention, yet you will not even give her a smile or call her mamma."

"Oh, father, how can we call her mamma! Our mamma has passed away and Spencer says we must never forget her. Every night we talk about her and wish her back again—and sometimes pray that we may be taken to her," and tears filled the big serious eyes of Mary, and the others remained silent.

"Many years ago, before you were born, Mary I came to Philadelphia. My father had just died, and I came to live with your Aunt Marjory. Your mother was there, a sunny faced girl of 18. Her hair was light like yours, Alice and her eyes big and blue. Her winning smile soon captivated my boyish heart, and I thought I was in love with Helen. The summer following and in the fall your mother, cousin Gertrude came to stay with us. She was entirely different from Helen, she was tall and dark, with eyes like the night. She was older than your mother and more serious, and they were fast friends. Soon I began to feel indifferent towards Helen, and yearn for Gertrude's society. I did not know what to do, I knew where my honor was, and I knew where my heart was, and worst of all I knew where their hearts were—with me!"

"One bright afternoon I told Gertrude of this love for her, and instead of bearing a like response, she treated me with cold displeasure, and with withering scorn, told me what she thought of me for speaking thus to her, when I had already won Helen's heart!"

"We had been walking in the woods and were returning to the city, as we were passing an unfinished house I was struck by a falling brace. I was unconscious for a time, and when I opened my eyes, I gazed into the white face of Gertrude—and there read her secret. For one brief moment I was wild with joy—but call for a moment. When she saw that she was regaining my senses, her attitude became totally indifferent. I was, for a long time, and when at last I was able to leave my room, she had gone and with her all the sunshine of my life! She left a note telling me not to seek her until my debt of honor had been paid."

"And so I married Helen, your mother. God knows I tried to be a faithful and affectionate husband to her, and she now knew Gertrude had left with out a word, and never wrote or came to see her after we were married. And so she died, in the belief that she was the only one in my life. As all these years your mother Gertrude heart was breaking. After three years I found her and brought her here. It was because she loved you mother so well that she sacrificed her happiness, and now, my children, can't you give her a little of that love she so nobly left untouched for you?"

There was silence in the darkened room and then sobb. When Gertrude returned after her duty was done, there were three wet little faces an outstretched arms to greet her. An when the last great grief befell them, they went together for the loved one who had brought them together.—KATHERINE FITZPATRICK.

MEAT EATING AND SHOES.

How the Spread of Vegetarianism May Boost Price of Footwear.

There are six really big shoe factories in the United States. These turned out 25,000,000 pairs of shoes last year. Shoes to the value of $16,000,000 were sent abroad, and the remainder, valued at $340,000,000, were used in this country. Although the trade in rubbers increases every year, only $70,000,000 was spent for such things last year.

We are told that the preaching of vegetarianism interferes greatly with the shoe business. Last year Germans took a notion to eat less meat and, according to the Bookkeeper, the shoe manufacturers in the land of the Kaiser were in despair. It is necessary to sell a great deal of meat in order that hides may be obtained without loss.

This is another instance of the need of co-operation between manufacturers of all kinds. Unless Swift and Armour and the other packers are able to sell their goods the factories in the East must do with less leather. When the factories are forced to get along with less leather the world must also pay a higher price for those it does buy.

It is interesting to know that the foreign shoe trade is constantly increasing. American salesmen are entering Darkest Africa and inducing the natives to court dunnions and corsets by departing from their good custom of going barefoot.

The Sailed Banker.

Leslie M. Shaw, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, was discussing with a correspondent a financial muddle.

"They lied," said the famous financier, "but as with Hugh Heston of Castana, their lying was absurd."

"When I was in the banking business in Charter Oak there was a young coal heaver of Castana who courted a Charter Oak girl. His name was Hugh Heston, and he pretended to be a banker."

"But one afternoon the girl happened to visit Castana, and she saw Hugh hurrying home for supper, as black as the ace of spades. He would have dodged past without speaking but the girl held him up."

"Whar, Hugh, she said, reproachfully, 'I thought you were a banker!'"

"He heaved a kind of sigh."

"Ah," he said, "we've had a terrible day of it to-day, cleaning all the ink wells."

Duty.

Duty is an old-fashioned word, but it is well to keep it in one's vocabulary. Some young people imagine that duty is something desperate, difficult and unpleasant. Some think of it only as connected with going to church and missionary work. To some it means a great sacrifice that man is called on to make on one or two great occasions in a lifetime. To many it is a word bearing no pleasant impression. And many more do not think about it at all. Duty is not a thing for special occasions, nor does it require any great courage or sacrifice. To do one's duty is simply to do right, a daily and hourly responsibility. It is one's duty to be honest and kind; to be cheerful and make happiness; to delight in every good and beautiful thing. "The reward of one duty is 'he power to fulfill another.'"—Milwaukee Journal.

Their Advantages.

"So you have made up your mind to be a specialist. What line are you going to take up?"

"I don't know. I have been considering various advantages in different branches. A chiropodist can generally get a foothold, no matter how bad business is; a manicurist has usually something on hand; a beauty doctor can usually play a skin game and an eye and ear doctor can often get a hearing when there is anything in sight. I haven't dwelt on the possibilities of throat specialists and dentists or hair experts, because the former always look-down-in-the-mouth and the latter may get a bad living or be expected to dye for his patients."—Baltimore American.

Marina's Spider.

In a French scientific periodical M. Louis Fage describes a new species of marine spider. It has been found among calcareous sea weeds on the Mediterranean shores. Like our own water spider, it can carry under water with it a bubble of air. It lives in the burrows of rock boring shells, or in the empty shells of other species. By spinning numerous threads across the mouth, it keeps the water out of its submarine abode. It can creep about the bottom, but has to keep a firm hold to prevent the shell from rising to the surface. Small flies and mites probably serve it for food.

Tempora Mutantur.

"A certain young man, wishing to be very thrifty, quit eating meat. 'Franklin abstained from meat,' quoth he, 'and so will I.'"

But he didn't stop to consider how prices have gone up since Franklin's day, and especially within the last few years. The result was that when he hadn't eaten meat for about six months he was so much money to the good that he lost his head and became one of the gilded youth.

The outdoor ideals of yesterday should be taken up very gradually, if at all.—Puck.

A Satisfactory Toothache.

A lad who had just had a tooth extracted requested the privilege of putting it home with him. "I want to put some sugar in it," he said, "and wash it with a brush."

Bachelor Queen

Old maids are a nuisance and old bachelors are an abomination.

Old maids are a nuisance and old bachelors are an abomination, as claimed sprightly Marie Courtleigh, the girls at the summer institute of Forest Lake were busy at work at their benches preparing lettuce slips or transplanting. They were enjoying camp life with its attendant discipline and studying school gardening at the same time. At the bugle call of "revallie" they arose each morning worked, studied and recreated at the periods. Every night when the echoes of "taps" reverberated from the surrounding hills, all lights were out, the camp was still, and Morpheus reigned supreme.

On the odium attached to spinsterdom, laughingly interposed Miss Gordon, one of the summer school instructors and matrons of the dormitory, suddenly appearing in the doorway. "What horrible creatures old maids are. Why does not Oler order some of his soothing chloroform to these useless creatures and consign them to sweet oblivion? Give a bag of you, escape if possible this sad state of single blessedness; but if fate should unkindly relegate you to sip your cup of tea in a lonely corner when you are old and gray, reject the odious title of 'old maid' and adopt the modern term of 'bachelor girl.'"

The girls stood aghast at this unexpected speech from their beloved teacher. She was a woman in middle life, intellectual, refined and sympathetic, the idol of her girls because of her scholarly attainments and her sterling qualities. In youth she had been fair as a goddess. Her Grecian head, crowned with a glory of silver gray hair waved over a smooth, broad forehead; grayish blue eyes, patrician nose and firm mouth bespoke honorable ancestry and gentle breeding. The years had dealt kindly with her; nature had not robbed her of many of her youthful charms, for she proved a kind mother to her ardent devotees.

Marie felt that she must redeem herself in her favorite's estimation, and apologetically added, "Miss Gordon, when girls get together, the eternal 'he' is generally the subject of consideration. I wonder if 'the eternal she' is the topic when the lords of creation assemble."

"Undoubtedly it is," said Miss Gordon, "although I say so tentatively, as I have not had the opportunity afforded me to settle that question here the shadow of a doubt. But, setting aside, girls, I have come to ask you to honor me with your presence at a farewell chafing dish and marshmallow party to-morrow evening at the 'Bugalow.' The board of administration has allowed the use of the building until the first call of 'taps.' Will you come, my friends?"

"Of course we will," chimed all the girls, surrounding their "summer mother," dancing and singing a song composed in her honor by one of their number.

The next evening the "Bugalow" presented a scene from fairyland. A log fire was burning in the open fireplace, lighted Japanese lanterns swung gaily to and fro, and the girls in their airy muslin gowns gave the final touch of fresh, vivacious, bubbling, airy life. Miss Gordon presided at the chafing dish, assisted by her dancing butterflyes. Marshmallows valor were toasted on hatpins before the open fire. Finally, the repeat of judge, sandwiches and fancy cakes was spread upon the "bugalow" table in a circle around the fireplace.

"A story, a story from Miss Gordon," shouted athletic Alice Barkley when interest in eating began to wane. Miss Gordon bowed graciously, saying, "I will tell you a true story of 'A Girl That I Have Known.'"

"Some years ago in New York I knew a young woman of 19 who was preparing to be a teacher. She was of an intense nature, strong in her likes and dislikes. The mother, who or satisfied her, she was seeking the ideal in life. Her friends had advised her never marry because the bargain she sought did not exist in human form. Yet they were wrong in their conclusion.

"When her training was over she selected to work in the East Side, in that congested district where the stunted flowers in the 'Lord's garden' do not enjoy their rightful heritage of fresh air, sunshine and cleanliness. Here she met a young physician, another enthusiast, aiming to be a leader in his profession. His specialty was the study of the 'Great White Plague,' its cause, treatment and eradication. These two idealists became engaged, but their hopes of marriage were never realized, as he died a victim of typhoid. She still labors in her chosen sphere, teaching the beauties of God's creation to the children of the Ghetto. Her labor may not bear fruit in this generation, but it cannot fail to reap results in the next."

Just then Miss Gordon arose to sound the first call of "taps." The girls remained motionless, awed by the subdued voice of the narrator and the dull flashes of light reflected on the rafters from the dying embers. "It is the story of her own life," whispered Alice to the wondering group.

"A toast, a toast to Miss Gordon," cried the irrepressible Marie Courtleigh. "All stand and lift your glasses high in her honor." As each girl was about to drain the cup of sparkling beverage, Marie proclaimed, "To Miss Gordon, Queen of Bachelor Girls," and with a wonderfully sweet but hoarse voice Miss Gordon, slightly accepting the homage, "MISS MARY," said GERRY.

As a Bachelor Queen

Old maids are a nuisance and old bachelors are an abomination.

Old maids are a nuisance and old bachelors are an abomination, as claimed sprightly Marie Courtleigh, the girls at the summer institute of Forest Lake were busy at work at their benches preparing lettuce slips or transplanting. They were enjoying camp life with its attendant discipline and studying school gardening at the same time. At the bugle call of "revallie" they arose each morning worked, studied and recreated at the periods. Every night when the echoes of "taps" reverberated from the surrounding hills, all lights were out, the camp was still, and Morpheus reigned supreme.

On the odium attached to spinsterdom, laughingly interposed Miss Gordon, one of the summer school instructors and matrons of the dormitory, suddenly appearing in the doorway. "What horrible creatures old maids are. Why does not Oler order some of his soothing chloroform to these useless creatures and consign them to sweet oblivion? Give a bag of you, escape if possible this sad state of single blessedness; but if fate should unkindly relegate you to sip your cup of tea in a lonely corner when you are old and gray, reject the odious title of 'old maid' and adopt the modern term of 'bachelor girl.'"

The girls stood aghast at this unexpected speech from their beloved teacher. She was a woman in middle life, intellectual, refined and sympathetic, the idol of her girls because of her scholarly attainments and her sterling qualities. In youth she had been fair as a goddess. Her Grecian head, crowned with a glory of silver gray hair waved over a smooth, broad forehead; grayish blue eyes, patrician nose and firm mouth bespoke honorable ancestry and gentle breeding. The years had dealt kindly with her; nature had not robbed her of many of her youthful charms, for she proved a kind mother to her ardent devotees.

Marie felt that she must redeem herself in her favorite's estimation, and apologetically added, "Miss Gordon, when girls get together, the eternal 'he' is generally the subject of consideration. I wonder if 'the eternal she' is the topic when the lords of creation assemble."

"Undoubtedly it is," said Miss Gordon, "although I say so tentatively, as I have not had the opportunity afforded me to settle that question here the shadow of a doubt. But, setting aside, girls, I have come to ask you to honor me with your presence at a farewell chafing dish and marshmallow party to-morrow evening at the 'Bugalow.' The board of administration has allowed the use of the building until the first call of 'taps.' Will you come, my friends?"

"Of course we will," chimed all the girls, surrounding their "summer mother," dancing and singing a song composed in her honor by one of their number.

The next evening the "Bugalow" presented a scene from fairyland. A log fire was burning in the open fireplace, lighted Japanese lanterns swung gaily to and fro, and the girls in their airy muslin gowns gave the final touch of fresh, vivacious, bubbling, airy life. Miss Gordon presided at the chafing dish, assisted by her dancing butterflyes. Marshmallows valor were toasted on hatpins before the open fire. Finally, the repeat of judge, sandwiches and fancy cakes was spread upon the "bugalow" table in a circle around the fireplace.

"A story, a story from Miss Gordon," shouted athletic Alice Barkley when interest in eating began to wane. Miss Gordon bowed graciously, saying, "I will tell you a true story of 'A Girl That I Have Known.'"

"Some years ago in New York I knew a young woman of 19 who was preparing to be a teacher. She was of an intense nature, strong in her likes and dislikes. The mother, who or satisfied her, she was seeking the ideal in life. Her friends had advised her never marry because the bargain she sought did not exist in human form. Yet they were wrong in their conclusion.

"When her training was over she selected to work in the East Side, in that congested district where the stunted flowers in the 'Lord's garden' do not enjoy their rightful heritage of fresh air, sunshine and cleanliness. Here she met a young physician, another enthusiast, aiming to be a leader in his profession. His specialty was the study of the 'Great White Plague,' its cause, treatment and eradication. These two idealists became engaged, but their hopes of marriage were never realized, as he died a victim of typhoid. She still labors in her chosen sphere, teaching the beauties of God's creation to the children of the Ghetto. Her labor may not bear fruit in this generation, but it cannot fail to reap results in the next."

Just then Miss Gordon arose to sound the first call of "taps." The girls remained motionless, awed by the subdued voice of the narrator and the dull flashes of light reflected on the rafters from the dying embers. "It is the story of her own life," whispered Alice to the wondering group.

"A toast, a toast to Miss Gordon," cried the irrepressible Marie Courtleigh. "All stand and lift your glasses high in her honor." As each girl was about to drain the cup of sparkling beverage, Marie proclaimed, "To Miss Gordon, Queen of Bachelor Girls," and with a wonderfully sweet but hoarse voice Miss Gordon, slightly accepting the homage, "MISS MARY," said GERRY.