

MODISH NOTIONS IN FUR.

New Fashions Are Young Looking This Season.
The neckpieces of the season are all so quaintly girlish and pretty in the way that they are modeled that from the back it is hard to tell whether a woman wearing one is sixteen or thirty. They also give a real protection to the back and shoulders, being cut in round or V effect, with lifelike but somewhat pathetic looking paws and tails dangling at intervals. The muff is trimmed in the same fashion.
The simple, plain wrapper or bath robe should be included in every woman's wardrobe.

SMART BATH ROBE.

SMAR'S wardrobe. The one illustrated is made of quilted Indian silk and is soft, warm and cozy without any appreciable weight. The same model may be used for flannel or any material that is suitable for the purpose. This wrapper is made with fronts and backs, the back seam providing a graceful fit. There is a rolled collar, and the sleeves are in one piece.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

The Wearing of Artificial Flowers on Gowns is Very Fashionable.

The wearing of an artificial flower on a house gown is a revived fashion. Flowers are the favorite. They are of satin. Many gold and silver ones are used. They are placed at the top of the high waist drapery. The artificial gardenia is now worn at the end of the long shawl covers on coats instead of on the lapel.

Among the startling bodices that are worn in the afternoon with the high waisted long skirt is one that is made of points. The gown is in purple satin, both the skirt made with four scanty circular bouffants that are sloped sharply across the figure from right to left. The material is slightly draped at top of high waist line and caught at the left side with a buckle of amethyst. The bodice is full over the chest and is made in tones of purple a satin lining of dull purple covered with all Russian effects in costumes are modish this winter, and the clothes designed for children carry out the same idea. The school frock pictured is of the Russian type.

ATTRACTIVE TRIFLES.

Something Smart in Evening Sleeves.
A Jack Barrymore Fad.
The beaded tulle sleeve for evening frocks is the novelty of the hour. Seed pearls are freely mixed with gold and amethyst and coral beads on the white foundation. The sleeve is either a scarf drapery or shirred cap.

Jack Barrymore has started the fad among his matinee worshippers of wearing a narrow gold wedding ring above a signet ring on the little finger. Ethel's popular brother's pinkie finger bears a like adornment.

There is no limit to the width of the fur scarf or the muff. But both are as huge as the purse can buy. The size should be determined by the figure but it is not little women stagger and stumble under yards of pelts that could be worn comfortably only by a goddess.

mouse bows to pump style of wide ribbon that harmonize with their frocks. The fashionable doll that belongs to the fashionable mamma is apt to be exceedingly particular about her clothes, and the picture shows a dress for doll which is very smart. It is made after the most approved model and is correct in every particular.

FRIBBLES OF FASHION.

New Lingerie Fashions—Smart Semiprecious Jewelry.
It is one of the simplest little fancies of the year to thread lingerie with water ribbons than formerly, so that the bows are of good size and the ribbon bands are in proportion with the rest of the garment.

Paste jewelry is in every case the dubious substitute for maintainable elegance, whereas the semi-precious stone with its wealth of color set in simple metal is the durable, desirable, undercurrent.

ter front are made of printed bordered batiste in pretty colors.

Never since the directorate period has so much attention been paid to foot covering. Regardless of colds and danger to throat and lungs, fancy slippers or pumps of suede and buckskin are being worn with silk and openwork stockings.

The sailor collar is always becoming to girlish figures, and the blouse pictured shows such a collar arranged in a novel way. The material used for the blouse is shepherd's check, with trimmings of black and white piping. There are two box plaits at the back and front.

Lady's Mirror

A woman who never worries declares that there is nothing more detrimental to beauty in woman than worry. The worrying woman does not body any good. She simply invites the hand of time, which writes plenty of wrinkles on her brow around her eyes and mouth, paints her face yellow and gives a lack-luster eye that no ardent can brighten.

It is quite unnecessary to worry, and it is a total waste of energy, which could be better employed. You know a worrying woman the moment you see her. Her character is written in her face in wrinkles which you would think nothing short of an miracle would obliterate. Downright ugliness is a heavy price to have to pay for the possession of a bad habit but there it is. And not only does worry directly influence the complexion for evil, its more remote effects are no less potent in robbing the face of the peach bloom tints which are the admiration of the poet, the painter and the general public.

Worry affects the entire nervous system, and through it the liver and organs of digestion and the heart. The things a woman thinks have more than anything else the power to make or mar her beauty. So let her beware of worrying overmuch lest she lose the greatest of all the gifts.

To Make the Hair Healthy.

If you want to keep your hair in a healthy condition be careful always to use a clean hairbrush. Many bad cases of dandruff are due to carelessness in this matter. Directly the brush begins to look grimy wash it in soda and water. Have the water nearly boiling and "pat" it with the bristles. Be careful that the back of the brush does not get wet as it ruins the polish. When quite clean rinse in warm water, then let it stand for ten minutes in clean cold water and leave it in the air to dry. Don't put the brush to dry in the sun or too near the fire or the bristles will turn yellow. If the back has been damped rub it with sweet oil then polish.

To keep the hair bright and glossy few better methods exist than that of ventilation. The treatment should be practiced for five minutes each day, night and morning. The tresses should be separated one by one and shaken gently and slowly, so that the air may penetrate between the strands. If a maid's help is obtainable a still better result can be secured, the attendant fanning the air gently on to the hair with the right hand while supporting one lock at a time with the other.

A Sweet Breath.

General opinion is to the contrary, it is not always a condition of the teeth that causes unpleasant breath as stomach disturbances have the same effect.

If a thorough examination of the mouth fails to disclose any reason for an unpleasant breath no time should be lost in putting oneself under the care of a physician for there must be an internal condition that cannot fail to grow more serious with time if it is not corrected. The form of treatment for this state differs as the case requires, but it is safe to say that only easily digested food should be eaten and the utmost effort made to keep the stomach in a healthy state.

Constant rinsing of the mouth with antiseptics and deodorants, while they do not cure, are decidedly beneficial.

A remedy for this purpose is made from six and three-quarter drams of salicylic acid, seven and one-half grains each of orange flower water and oil of peppermint, one pint of alcohol water and one-half pint of alcohol.

The peppermint is mixed with one-half of the alcohol, the rest being put to the Florida water, and the liquid is then warmed by setting in a basin put into hot water.

The acid is dissolved in the warm bath, and the other ingredients are then added. The mouth may be well rinsed with this after eating and again at night. It is supposed to act favorably upon the teeth.

A Beauty Cure.

The beauty cure that is engaging the attention of fashionable society at the moment is the milk cure, and its only fault is that it is ridiculously cheap for a cure adopted by fashionable society. The milk is taken inwardly and outwardly.

A glass of hot milk slowly sipped at night composes the mind and prepares the body for restful slumber. Milk is rubbed into the face at night with a piece of soft linen and allowed to dry, and in the morning the face is washed in milk, but no soap must be used. Skin regularly washed in milk is declared to be proof against sunburn.

For the Complexion.

The woman who finds that her face is unusually dry and rough in winter should give a thought to the sort of care she is taking of it. If she persists in the use of alkaline soaps, toilet powders and aromatic vinegars, all of which are drying in their effect, she will soon be confronted by a lined or wrinkled skin. A better way is to rely upon a good cleansing cream and plenty of hot water, followed by cold water to stimulate the skin and close the pores.

POOR DEARIE.

By EDGAR FALES MOODEY.

(Copyright 1910 by American Press Association)

"But, Edward!"

"What?"

"How are we going to live? You have been brought up to believe that you were to be your aunt's heir, and now you tell me that she has left her estate so tied up that you can't touch it and that her other relatives are likely to beat you out of it."

"That's so, and they will beat me out of it if they learn how matters stand."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I can't enlighten you without telling the whole story."

"Well, tell it."

"It's too ridiculous."

"Ridiculous? Can anything that happens be so ridiculous? I will not bring trouble on you and on myself by marrying you, who, having been brought up on expectations, have made no preparation for earning a living."

"Perhaps not, but you'll laugh all the same when I tell you to whom my aunt left her property."

"To whom did she leave it?"

"I am next of kin and at the death of the present incumbent will succeed to the estate."

"I didn't ask that. I asked whom you made her heir."

"I am thinking of killing him."

"Oh, Edward!"

"It's the only sure way open to me."

If the other branches of the family hear of how the matter stands they'll break the will."

"But in that case you will get your share."

"That would be a few thousand out of there are several hundred relatives. I want the whole property."

"Can't you compromise with this person whom your aunt made her heir?"

"No. He isn't capable of making any agreement. He does nothing but steal about."

"Come, come. Tell me the legal points I have more head for such things than you suppose."

"Well, my aunt left the property to this person and considering who he is, the bequest is ridiculous. That will be the plea of the relatives if they try to break the will. But I, being the heir of this legatee at his death, will take possession of the property. The other heirs will still have good cause for a suit, but I will have the shadows of war understood."

"Yes, perfectly. But this person to whom the property has been—"

"Who you see him you will see a coxcomb."

"What was your aunt's attraction for him?"

"He was her husband."

"Her husband?"

"So she considered him."

"But I supposed your uncle died long ago."

"So he did."

"Well, then, how is it that this—"

"Bismarck!"

"Bismarck?"

"That's what he is. He has a couple of dozen wives."

"Edward! I'm not going to stand this any longer. You are attempting to make a fool of me."

"I assure you that everything I have said of him is true and worse. He has never been married to one of the wives with whom he lives."

"The best?"

"He is not a beast at all."

"Then for goodness' sake what kind of a person is he?"

"Listen to me. My aunt in her younger days was a great student. She studied everything—science, religion, philosophy. She passed from one system to another until she became a strong believer in the transmigration of souls. She was much attached to her husband, who humored her in her different faiths. There is no proof whatever but that she was sound in mind in her latter days, though she firmly believed that at her husband's death his soul passed into a little chick that broke through its shell the exact minute my uncle died. She at once took the greatest care of this chick, ordered a special house to be built for him and always called him 'Dearie,' the pet name she had had for my uncle. He grew up to be a fine rooster, and my aunt never relaxed the attention she had shown him from his birth."

"Well, when the old lady died and I came to look over her will, what did I find but that she had left her whole fortune to her husband in the body of this chicken."

"Ha, ha, ha!"

"Didn't I tell you you'd laugh?"

"It's too ridiculous."

"That's what I said too."

"Well"—after a pause—"what are you going to do?"

"Kill Dearie."

"And then?"

"Make application for the estate as his heir."

"Why not as next of kin?"

"There are too many next of kin. I would rather inherit $300,000 from a rooster than a few hundred from a human being."

"Well, then, why don't you kill him?"

"He is protected. The woman to whom my aunt paid a large salary to take care of him never lets him out of her sight. Force of habit from knowing when my aunt lived that if Dearie suffered she would lose a fat job leads her to still watch. But I'm going to try to get at him tonight with a hatchet."

"Godness gracious!"

"Oh, Edward, where have you been? There is blood on your shirt bosom!"

"There was blood in my eye last night."

"What have you done?"

"Dearie is no more. He is with his only legitimate wife."
