REIGN OF FILLETS

Fashions of Greece For the Easter Girl.

Greek and Roman fashions appear in the hair ornaments of today, but with a difference. Hairdressers hold that few American faces can stand the severity of purely classic adornments. A woman may be ever so charming, but unless she has Juno's perfect features she had better not assume Juno's fillet. Fillets and wreaths, though, American women will have, and some go so far as to crown their pompadours with two and even three bands. But they are bands such as the maids of Athens never had—fillets with attachments of spangled, sequined and jeweled wings and cabochons.

CLASSIC TOILET MODERNIZED

Then there are wreaths of grape leaves, with the fabric made of a lustrous tinsel fabric, exquisitely light, with a sort of mounting on the front effect. Hairdressers aver that if the fashions of old Greece and Rome, with their several fillets, could see these wreaths they would be green with envy, and as they aren't here to deny the statement it will have to be accepted. Debutantes with loads of busy hair can venture on wearing the simpler fillets of gold or silver, jeweled, rhinestones or sequins made without adornments of feathers or bows. A beautiful fillet is a pearl—made of pearls or beads—fastened at either side with cabochons of the same gem—but only a very lovely woman can wear this—ought to wear it, at least. The debutante nowadays is given to bows, curls, careful little ripples and flouting wisps of hair, which are charming when they are artistically done.

For the younger girl, who is not supposed to require many embellishments, are ribbon bowknots and loops and twists of silk to stick in her busy hair. Only for her older sisters are the gold and silver polka-dot, the winged insects, the clusters of golden fruit and the filmy birds. One favorite ornament for older girls is a tuft of frosted silver wheat mixed with the misty tresses of an silver wig caught to the hair with a silver white butterfly.

The beauty of these ornaments depends much on the quality of the tinsel. There's an awful difference in quality, remarked one dealer in hair ornaments as she laid out two specimens, one most exquisite, the other gaudy and fantastic just because of the cheap tinsel used in making it.

Two kinds of gold are fashionable in making up hair ornaments. One sort is turned pale gold and the other old gold. Neither has the decided yellow to be found in French side combs and countings for broad and narrow rhinestone bands.

Seasonable Salad.

Put some sweet oranges in small pieces and serve on crisp lettuce leaves with mayonnaise dressing.

Divide some medium sized tomatoes in half and remove all the seeds and hard portion. Cut the latter into small pieces and put it into a basin with some dice shaped pieces of cucumber and some finely sliced crisp lettuce leaves. Dress the whole with mayonnaise sauce. Fill the halves of the tomatoes with the mixture and place a large olive in the middle of each.

Arrange lettuce hearts on individual plates and place in the center of each one tomato, cut into small pieces, and on top of this sprinkle French and/or stalks, chopped very fine. Serve with French dressing of oil, vinegar and paprika.

Toasted cucumbers can be served with salad for a change in place of cheese wafers.

Mock Chicken Pie.

In a certain vegetarian family a mock chicken pie is made which is popular among friends who still cling to meat in their diet. A pint of pecan nuts is chopped fine and mixed with a cupful of pine nuts, one can of salt-tong mushrooms, half a dozen small onions that have been boiled whole and a can of corn. Three large potatoes are peeled, cut into dice, boiled half tender and drained. A sauce is made with two tablespoons each of butter and flour, and two cupfuls of water or milk. The sauce, the potatoes and the first mixture seasoned with salt and pepper are put into a baking dish, covered with a biscuit or potato crust and baked about half an hour in a hot oven. It is not a cheap dish, but it is tasty and nutritious, and it outwits the butcher.

To Polish Glass.

When a goblet or tumbler is cold after being washed it takes longer to dry and polish. It is best to leave such articles in a pan of warm water and dry each glass as it is lifted from the water.

EASTER GUESSING GAME

An Egg-strucuring Game For Evening Party.

Questions and answer games are so easy to prepare for and such good fun that a pleasant little evening can be built up from one or a few minutes' notice.

For such a game to be played during the Easter season try the new and lively one called an "Easter extravaganza."

The fun of the evening consists in guessing words beginning with an "E" syllable which for the time being is pronounced like eggs. For example:

- What egg are necessary in answering these questions? Eggs-accuracy.
- What egg are always overdone? Eggs-aggravation.
- What egg are high up? Eggs-alted.
- What egg investigate? Eggs-aunt-nation.
- What egg are models? Eggs-ample.
- What egg are irritated? Eggs-as-perated.
- What egg are fond of digging? Eggs-cavation.
- What egg surpass all others? Eggs-cel.
- What egg are very great? Eggs-ceedingly.
- What egg have a tiff? Eggs-col-lency.
- What egg are not included? Eggs-cept.
- What egg are unusual? Eggs-ceptional.
- What egg are too many? Eggs-cess.
- What egg are bartered? Eggs-change.
- What egg are unquiet? Eggs-cille-ble.
- What egg cry out? Eggs-claim.
- What egg depart? Eggs-closed.
- What egg may be cleared? Eggs-culpible.
- What egg are detestable? Eggs-cusable.
- What egg make allowances? Eggs-cuse.
- What egg reader dire justice? Eggs-ecutioners.
- What egg carry out orders? Eggs-ecute.
- What egg should be imitated? Eggs-emplary.
- What egg are solemn? Eggs-equities.
- What egg are athletic? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.
- What egg are most? Eggs-ercises.

What egg advise? Eggs-herb.
 What egg please? Eggs-herb.
 What egg go out? Eggs-herb.
 What egg live? Eggs-herb.
 What egg are too much? Eggs-herb.
 What egg drive out devils? Eggs-herb.
 What egg are wide? Eggs-herb.
 What egg banish? Eggs-herb.
 What egg look for? Eggs-herb.
 What egg hasten? Eggs-herb.
 What egg travel? Eggs-herb.
 If the company is a large one a question card can be used by two persons, one gentleman and one lady, becoming partners for the evening.

This will reduce the work of copying one-half.
 The two persons whose card was filled is pronounced most correct by the hostess and her corps of aides carry off the prize or, rather, the two prizes.

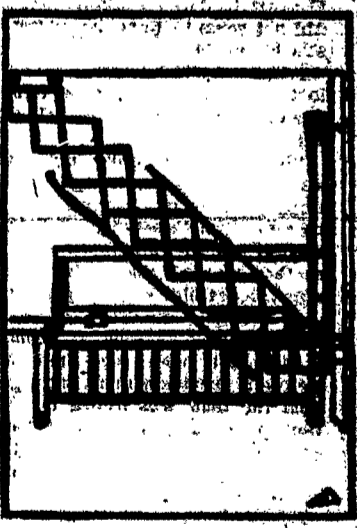

An hour is a good time limit for the game, all players beginning and ending work at the same moment.

Crystal and silver articles in egg forms are just the ones for prizes for such an occasion.

FOLDING STAIRS

They Can Be Let Down Between Floors or Drawn Up at Will.

An ingenious invention that is a great space-saver in the folding stair. This stair works on the heavy-duty principle and can be drawn up or extended at will. All that is needed is to pull on a small spring in the door. A large enough to admit a person comfortably. The stair is then fastened to a post at one end and a pair of spiral doors fastened under it to open downwards. The opening can be guarded by railings if so desired. The position is controlled by a gear, and when not in use the stair rests in closed position against the top of the post while the spring doors are closed beneath it, and any person passing beyond the gear, however, the stair is extended, pushes its way through the spring doors and comes down to the floor below, where it rests on rollers. With the hand rail for a support one may then ascend it in safety. The door is rather hard on the knees and the ceiling.

The Cedar House

Atwood in Case by Last Story of Duration and Growth.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

ONCE upon a time by a beautiful grove of cedars that rested their canopy above the low roof.

Once when she was quite a little girl Dorinda Rodman had asked her mother a question: "Why did grand father plant such black trees? They hide the sun."

Mrs. Rodman tapped Dorinda's good ear with her thumb and frowned. Grandfather planted the trees, he never be wanted them to grow there. You should be thankful that there is such a pleasant shade during the hot weather, child.

"But they are so black," protested Dorinda.

"They are very beautiful," returned Mrs. Rodman, with an air of decision.

Dorinda grew up to womanhood believing that the cedar trees that grew about her home and shadowed it from dawn till sunset, were beautiful because Grandfather Rodman had planted them sixty years ago when he made a home in the wilderness for his little family.

Inside the house Dorinda named her two old, old maps, because of her grandfather.

"You should put them away in some institution," Dorinda said a neighbor one day when the girl had hurried past her daily work in the kitchen.

"You're talking care of those two old men. You're young and you ought to be having a good time."

"They are all the relatives I have in the world," said Dorinda sadly. "I could not let them go to strangers as long as I have a roof over my head."

Her golden hair began to grey and her gray eyes to grow sad and troubled with care, but Gilbert Fane continued to smile her smile. "O dear, dear," she said.

Cedar House and made her home with him in the city. Gilbert Fane was a kind man, and he brought Dorinda to believe the two places and they would measure something.

But Dorinda always shook her head decidedly. "They live in the city now, Gilbert. And they want to be around me. As for me, I shall not marry any one. Do not talk to me. When I am left alone I shall go away."

"When you are left alone you shall marry me," Gilbert declared solemnly. "You have lived so long in the shadow of this dark house that you do not know how happy you may be one day. Let me tell you what I have in mind. I will buy the Cedar House and make it a museum."

"I love the red cedar," interrupted Dorinda sadly. "My grandfather planted them."

"When your grandfather planted those trees the middle was a wilderness and there was no protection against the power of the northwest wind. The trees that grew on the other side of the river from a winter break now, and you can well imagine with the cedars."

When she was a child she had often seen her grandfather... (The rest of the text is too faint to transcribe accurately but appears to be a continuation of the story.)
