Unique Gift This For Eggs. H. Chandler Egau added the rather unique title of western indoor golf champion to his achievements recently when he defeated Harry R. Rockwell of the Calumet County club by 8 up and 5 to play in the final over the Minnesota course at the Wabash Avenue School, Chicago. The tournament has been in progress for over a month.

Milk Makes a Good Hog Feed. When milk makes its way to hogs it may be given them in the form of trash and soaked or ground and wet to a thin slop. For fattening hogs a succulent feed should be given with milk, such as early cut sorghum, stock feed, one, best or green corn, alfalfa hay, etc. M. M. Cottrell, Colorado Agricultural College.

HINTS FOR FARMERS

Profitable Stock. We are daily coming in contact with the products of the dairy cow in one form or another. True it is to the interest of the owner of the dairy breed of cattle to carefully select animals when buying a foundation for his herd which will yield him the best milk and also produce animals which will be good healthy stock, but which give good profit production of other words, that yield a low fat content, efficient butter fat to support the animal worth the milk of keeping upon the premises.

While it is always essential that animals be well fed and cared for, it is sometimes found that the animal producing the largest amount of milk is not necessarily the animal which supports the most milk. And for this reason the owner should have the composition of each individual and feed it accordingly. In this way maximum profits which might otherwise be visited.—Dr. David Roberts.

For Wormy Sheep. It is an erroneous belief that any worm powder can be prepared that can be placed in cut or given in grain that will kill mature worms in a sheep's stomach. The chief and only value of a worm powder is to prevent infection and to keep the young worms as they hatch out from maturing. To get rid of mature worms I never have seen anything that equaled the proper use of gasoline, but it must be given after fasting and well mixed with oil or milk and absten to the very moment it is given or it will injure or even kill the sheep. A desiccated powder of gasoline mixed in not less than four tablespoonfuls of pure raw flaxseed oil and a half pint of sweet milk will shake up to the very moment of pouring it on the sheep's back.

Best remedy known up to the present time.—C. V. Seward, V. S., in National Stockman.

Counting Blood Counts. In selecting gifts from any young litter for raising as breeders the number of tests should always be ascertained. A sow can rear no more than one or two she has tests, for each keeps jealously to its own. And, singularly enough if one of the litter dies it is very rarely if ever that one of the surviving youngsters takes to the spare test. The number of tests that sows have varies from ten to sixteen, but fourteen is quite a goodly array. The numbers vary with the breeds a bit, and most of our big, free breeding sows are pretty well furnished with tests. This is so it should be that many a little piggy would come on the scene with no foot to run to.—Rural World (England).

A DOMESTIC TRAGEDY.

She tried to fascinate Hubby and she finally failed.

Hubby had been reading up a little on the subject of domestic tragedy and he had decided to try and catch her in the act.

"What's that?" she asked.

"That's what I'm reading," he said.

"Don't you dare to try me!" she said.

"Yes," he said, "I don't intend to try you, but I do intend to try and catch you."

"What's that?" she asked.

"That's what I'm reading," he said.

"Don't you dare to try me!" she said.

"Yes," he said, "I don't intend to try you, but I do intend to try and catch you."
