

THE TIME WILL COME

(ALLES RÄCHT SICH)

Sung by the clever comedienne LAURA BARRIE at the leading New York Music Halls.

Allegretto. When I was ten and she fifteen, Ah me, how fair I thought her; she treated with disdainful scorn the homage that I brought her; And in a pe-ri-od of time I would of my sky ad-vo-cate say: "It's real-ly quite ab-surd you see, He's ver-y much too young for me."

In-ter-va - ly now. The time will come, how old she's grow - ing! I know my suit might thin if I present myself; But owing to great de-press-ion - it's up, she's looking - she's not in - ga-ge my young of - fice, she's not in - ga-ge me, she's real-ly quite too old for me.

POWDER AND GUNS.

Evidence That They Were Used Long Before the Christian Era.

There is abundant evidence that the origin of gunpowder and artillery goes far back in the dim ages of the past.

The Hindus, who, according to legend, were the first to use gunpowder, prohibited the making of war with cannon and guns of any kind. Quibus Curibus inform us that Alexander the Great met with the weapons in Asia, and Philostrophus says that Alexander's conquests were assisted by the use of gunpowder. It is also written that when the men who lived in the cities of the Ganges "cast their stones with cannons and catapults shot from the walls."

John Addison mentions shooting powder in the year 980. It was used in the siege of Constantinople in 1041, by the Arabs in 1071, at the siege of Belgrade in 1094, by the Greeks in several battles in 1292, by the Arabs against the Saracens in 1391 and at Toulon in 1393.

It appears to have been generally known throughout civilized Europe as early as 1280, and was introduced into Italy in 1300, and into England, where it was introduced during the reign of Edward I, and was used in the battle of Tewkesbury in 1471.

It is believed that the Chinese discovered gunpowder in 1170.

One day when he was giving a dinner party to some distinguished people (Sheridan went for one of the bottles, and he was now able to settle his account and invited him to the dinner party, asking him to come before the hour for some private conversation.

Chick arrived early, and he was in company in the house when Sheridan sent of a servant with a note to the clerk, desiring him, as Mr. Chick was favoring him with his company, to send as soon as possible three dozen of burgundy, two dozen of claret and two dozen of port, with a dozen of old back.

The unsuspecting clerk sent the wine, with which the guests were so pleased that they asked where it came from. Sheridan, turning toward Chick, said, "I am indebted to my friend who he all the time you have been and all through the night."

Chick said, "I am indebted to my friend who he all the time you have been and all through the night."
