

A Request to Our City Subscribers

There is but a very small margin of profit in our subscription price of $1.00 a year. (Nearly all other Catholic weeklies charge $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 a year.) For this reason we request you to pay your subscription to the collectors promptly when they call.

The subject of discussion will be "John Mitchell". This is a very interesting subject for all who are not yet acquainted with the life of Mitchell.

Mr. Mitchell was a staunch friend of the Irish cause during the Irish revolutionary war and was banished to America for his activity in same.

While in America he was editor of the Irish Citizen of New York and later of the Southern Citizen at Knoxville, Tenn. He was also editor of the Richmond Examiner during the American civil war.

While yet in exile Mr. Mitchell was elected member of Parliament for County Tipperary. He served in this office a short time. He died March 20, 1875 at his native town Newry, under the same roof that had sheltered his birth.

Selling Their Nicknames.

A traveler from Liverpool got hopping and the other day became known as the city salesman. "I couldn't believe it, but the man who unwittingly offered the name for people who live in Liverpool."

"He pointed out that it isn't easy to imagine the inhabitants of all cities by euphonious names. New York, London, Paris, Chicago, are obvious that it would be difficult to say anything else, but how about cities that do not affiliate so readily with 'ast' or 'ite'?"

"They are the suffixes most commonly used to designate a set of natives. Take Cork. A man from Cork may be a corker, but that doesn't apply to a whole city full of people; neither does Corkite nor Corker sound right."

"Then there is Memphis. What do you call a man from Memphis, anyhow, or from Amsterdam, or Dallas, or Bruga, or Bath? By the time you have studied out the proper appellation for inhabitants of all cities you would be apt to strike something that sounds funnier than Liverpoolian." Washington Post.

Grin Music.

"On one occasion," said a London actor, "I decided to take a house in the suburbs and after a good deal of hunting about found one that suited my purse. Indeed, it was so excessively cheap that I was on the point of signing the lease at once, when it occurred to me that I had better take another look at it by daylight. That night I was making a second tour of inspection and went into the dining room. It was a delay summer night, and as I threw open the window I heard a peculiar tapping sound."

"Knock, knock, knock."

"I pricked up my ears to listen. There was silence for a moment, and then the noise continued. I turned to the caretaker and laughingly said: 'See here, my friend, I know why this house is cheap. There's a ghost on the premises.'"

"Oh, no, sir," he answered by way of reassuring me. "That's only the noise from the coffin factory across the way, sir. They bolt works there night."

He did not sign the lease.

Caught the Jury. "Oratory is, indeed, a lost art," said a Cleveland man the other day. "I used to go down to the courts just to hear the lurid speeches. Nothing doing in that line any more. The lawyers do not talk about, flowers, rainbows and sea-breeze any more."

"There was a lawyer in Cleveland years ago—Bill Robison was his name—whose addresses to a jury always attracted a crowd. I will forever remember one of his sentences. The man he was getting in the cell had a reputation as something of a thief."

"Who is this man, who is he?" thundered Robison. "You know and I know that he bolts his potatoes in widows' tears."

"This phrase caught the jury, and Robison won his case, but one doesn't hear any such 'wisdom' as that nowadays."

The Barbone Family. The celebrated name of Praise God Barbone was borne by a member of the Cromwell-parliament called together after the dissolution of the long parliament in 1653. The royalists called the assembly "Barbone's parliament." At the time when General Monk was in London Barbone headed the mob that presented a petition to parliament against the recall of Charles II. Of the Barbone family there were three brothers, each of whom had a sentence for a name—Praise God Barbone, Christ-came-into-the-world-to-save Barbone and Christ-had-not-died-thou-hadst-been damned Barbone.

Poison in Young Rattlesnakes. Observations on live rattlesnakes show that the poison glands become functionally active as soon as the snakes begin to shift for themselves, which must be very soon after birth. Experiments on the young ones six days after birth proved the presence of venom in small quantities. Experiments made three months after birth showed that considerable venom is secreted, as a pigeon inoculated at this time died in two hours with the usual symptoms of chronic poisoning.

The Value of Doors. When a man in a crowd there isn't anything in the world more aggravating than a house with all the connecting doors down or one that has doors that close noiselessly. A man likes to slam a door. He gets more good out of slamming a door, in his opinion, than any one could get out of religion. It is his protest against everything in the world that is wrong, and it means that he isn't much older than the child that beats its head on the floor.—Acheson Globe.

Hard on Him. "Hello, Ned, old boy! Writing home for money?" "No."

"What are you making so much fuss over? You've been fuming over that letter for two hours."

"I'm trying to write home without asking for money."

The Usual Quantity. Train Passenger (to porter, who is welding whisky)—Much dust on me, porter? Porter—"About 60 cents' worth, sah.—Boston Transcript.

Superior Dyeing and Cleaning

There is nearly a hundred years of experience back of our cleaning and dyeing work. The Old Island Dyeing House was established in 1619 with two exceptions it is the largest establishment of its kind in the world. Its work is as near perfect as can be attained.

Anything dyeable, we can dye. Anything cleanable, we can clean. We do not pretend to work miracles.

One of the Main street windows this week shows some of the work of our Cleaning and Dyeing Department.

At this season you should be interested in the work we make new:

- Lingerie Dresses
- Living Suits
- Blankets
- Draperies
- Lace Curtains, etc.

We also clean and press men's suits. Main Floor—Rear of Aisle
