Two battles. Porfirio Diaz gained national prominence and won his spurs at the battle of Puebla, where the Liberal forces made a gallant but ineffectual stand against the French, who had invaded Mexico for the purpose of erecting a throne for Maximilian. Notwithstanding the fact that the Mexican forces were defeated, their defense against superior numbers was so gallant that the anniversary of the battle of the 5th of May became a national holiday in Mexico. A brave American once asked Diaz, "Why do you Mexicans celebrate a defeat when you know that the French took Puebla?" President Diaz, with a twinkle in his eye, replied, "Perhaps we have imitated the Americans even to the extent of celebrating our defeats, for I have been told that the British defeated the colonists at Bunker Hill, and yet you build a monument to commemorate the event."

SNAPSHOTS AT CELEBRITIES

Henry T. Gage, Uncle Sam's Minister to Portugal.

© 1910, by American Press Association.

During the recent political upheaval in Portugal Uncle Sam was represented at Lisbon by Henry Tift Gage, whose experience as a diplomat dates only from last April, although he handled the delicate situations that arose with fine tact and skill. Former Governor Gage was chief executive of California, 1890-1903, is rather a unique character. When he called for his post last spring he carried with him, it is said, eighteen pairs of long-legged boots. Since his youth he has stuck to that style of footwear and vows he will never wear any other kind. Governor Gage was appointed minister to Portugal in December, 1909, but deferred his departure for several months. He is a native of New York state and his boyhood was spent at Saginaw, Mich., where he was educated. He was admitted to the bar in 1873 and since 1877 has practiced law in Los Angeles, Cal.

Wat of Sir William Robson. Sir William Robson, Great Britain's leading counsel at the Hague international tribunal, is by no means the dry and serious individual one might imagine him to be. He is a brilliant speaker and has a ready wit, and as a gentleman he once defended said of him, "He seems to get on good terms with his audience and, though he pretends to be jesting with them, he is all the time working home his point." On one occasion in the house of commons, when he was a member for South Shields, after a lengthy debate a member of the opposite bench complained with a touch of bitterness that evidently Sir William could not avail low his argument. No," said Sir William without hesitation, "I don't want to die of indigestion." M. A. P.

May Succeed Senator Hale. Charles F. Johnson of Waterville, who is mentioned as the probable successor to Eugene Hale of Maine in the United States senate, is one of the most prominent Democrats in the Pine Tree State. Not since the Republican party came into being has Maine been represented in the national senate by a Democrat. Mr. Johnson is fully equipped, his friends maintain, to uphold Maine's prestige at Washington. He is proposed of the statesmanlike qualities which have distinguished so many of Maine's congressional delegations in the past. He is a native of the Pine Tree State, a lawyer by profession and is fifty-two years old. He was graduated from Bowdoin college in 1879 and while studying law taught school to pay his expenses. Mr. Johnson has been twice the candidate of his party for governor and in each campaign received the Republican majority.
