Significant.

William B. Bailey, Ph. D., assistant professor of political economy in Yale University, had a brief but significant article on "The World's Divorce Record" in which the most startling facts are not stated boldly but must be deduced from other stated facts.

Professor Bailey gives a statistical table for the years from 1899-1908, if he had taken the five following years the comparison would have presented a still more appalling record for the United States. However, here are the figures referred to:

Table with 3 columns: Country, Number of divorces, Per 100,000 population. Includes Austria, France, German Empire, Great Britain, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, United States.

The United States next to Japan, to all intents and purposes a pagan country! It will be noted that Great Britain, which means England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland grouped together, has but six divorces to every 100,000 population. But Ireland, taken alone has the magnificent distinction of only one divorce in the period referred to!

Spain is not tabulated. Can it be said to have none?

These figures may prove Ireland benighted in the eyes of the progressive men and women. But old-fashioned and morality-loving persons will find in them a cause for rejoicing and would wish that similar conditions might prevail in this country.

Of Great Value.

In the course of an interesting paper read before the National Congress of Holy Name Societies in Baltimore, Rev. Geo. T. Bennett, of Jersey City, gave this estimate of the value of Holy Name Societies and parades:

Catholic men, at least occasionally, should show the strength of their faith as Christians, and nothing is better suited to manifest this strength than the rallies of the Holy Name Society held annually in the certain cities. It brings together the lawyer, the doctor, and the collegian, the laborer, the clerk, the man of business and the man of books; the one with great possessions and him who is poor in this world's goods, and all, in the light of day, march shoulder to shoulder as fellow-members of that grand Society of the Holy Name, who believe in the same religious truths, proving to those who foolishly imagine or vainly hope that the Christian faith is dying before the assaults of science or the onslaughts of wordliness that the Catholic Church and her laity are still to be reckoned with, and that our holy Mother Church still holds possession of the hearts of her children.

But their close and more personal benefits follow. For instance when the men of our Holy Name Societies are seen in public parades by their fellow-Catholics who are not members, these latter are fired with zeal of emulation, and they begin to feel that they, too, ought to join this society. At once they begin to inquire into the aims and purposes of the Holy Name member takes upon himself, and when they find that the obligations are not so awfully hard of fulfillment and that if they give their names as members of the Holy Name Society, they will thereby become real live Catholic men, doing what any honestly sincere man should do, they express a desire to be enrolled; and before we are aware of it or they realize it themselves they have become enthusiastic. Thus the rallies increase our own solidarity.

Prophetic.

Before it was known that Pope Pius X would elevate him to the Cardinalate, Archbishop Farley made these statements, which may prove prophetic, in the course of his response to the toast "The Hierarchy of the United States" at the banquet in honor of Cardinal Gibbons' golden jubilee:

"The hierarchy of the United States is the largest, most flourishing in the world; and second to none in its loyalty to the Holy See. The relationship between us and the Holy See is freer from entanglements, from interruptions, than in any part of the world, for here the Holy Father can take or send whom he will without restraint from national influences, from kings or emperors."

"Bishop Manning, in 1870, at Rome, said that the reason the Irish clergy were to be found in every portion of the globe was because the Irish Church had never had the collar of royalty on its neck. Thank God that we are the same here; that we are living in a free country, where none shall say, as was said, 'You shall not read that letter from the Pope here.'"

"In education we are teaching the people the standards of the true education which has in it the morality of Christ. Let us continue."

"Let me tender to your Eminence the warmest congratulations from the Diocese of New York and hope that the 'Ambassador of Christ' might continue to spread 'The Faith of Our Fathers,' that indeed he should go from that great council chamber where he now sits in the Sacred College of Cardinals to a higher place, and that before he is gathered to the golden gate of eternity our American Cardinal might pass still higher from that college to the one great place in Rome."

In High Places.

The national commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, elected in Rochester last August, John E. Gillman is a fourth degree member of the Knights of Columbus and for thirty years has sung in the choir of the Jesuit church in Boston.

Canada's chief justice, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick is a devout Catholic.

Aram J. Pothier, re-elected Governor of Rhode Island, is the first Catholic to occupy that position in the little State. But we fancy that he is not the only Catholic Governor in the United States. Is there not a Catholic Governor in South Dakota?

The Catholic Journal hopes for a pleasant voyage to the Holy city for Cardinal-designate Falconio but regrets that he is not returning to this country where he has done so much for the Church.

If Bishop McQuaid were alive, he would rejoice that the Cardinal's hat has come to Archbishop Farley.

Now a Scottish National Catholic Congress is proposed.

His Grace John M. Farley, the New Cardinal.

The Most Rev. John M. Farley, who will be created cardinal at the coming consistory in Rome, is the second archbishop of New York to be made a member of the sacred college. Cardinal McCloskey, who was archbishop of New York from 1884 until his death in 1885, became the first American cardinal in 1874.

John M. Farley was born in Newton Hamilton, County Antrim, Ireland, on April 20, 1842. He was educated at Macartain's college, Monaghan, St. Joseph's seminary, Troy, N. Y., and afterward at the American college at Rome. He was ordained priest in the historic Church of St. John Lateran in Rome, in June, 1870, and came back immediately to this country to be a student priest at St. Peter's church, New Brighton, N. Y. He was appointed secretary to Cardinal McCloskey in 1872, and from that time his abilities marked him for promotion.

In 1884 Farley was made a monsignor and seven years later was appointed vicar general of the archdiocese of New York. He was created a domestic prelate to the pope in 1892 and prothonotary apostolic three years later. The same year he was consecrated an auxiliary bishop, and in 1902 he succeeded Archbishop Corrigan in the archdiocese of New York.

Archbishop O'Connell of Boston, Archbishop William H. O'Connell of Boston, who is to be elevated to the cardinalate at the approaching consistory, will with one exception be the youngest member of the sacred college. The new English cardinal is his junior by two years. A native of Lowell, Mass., Archbishop O'Connell will be fifty-two years old next December. He studied at Boston college and won a scholarship.

ARCHBISHOP W. H. O'CONNELL.

In the American college at Rome. He was ordained a priest in 1864 and became the first prefect in the American college, returning to America the following year. In 1896 he went to Rome again to become pontifical rector or president of the American college. He was consecrated bishop in Rome in 1901 and appointed to Portland, Me. As the bishop of Portland he was selected by the pope in 1905 to go to Japan as private messenger in connection with the placing of an apostolate in Tokyo. His appointment as archbishop of Boston came in 1907.

Cane Beat the Cure. Discussing faith healing and kindred phenomena, Dr. George Weston Reeves, the playwright, said recently in Cincinnati: "Faith healers would achieve even greater cures if they didn't so often weaken their patients' faith by asking for money. A man knotted with rheumatism limped into a Cincinnati faith healer's office on a gold-headed cane. The healer made a few passes, then said: 'Drop the cane and depart in peace.' 'Not on your life,' the man said, 'that cane was a present from my Sunday school class and cost $50.'"

A Wonderful Rochester Cure!

Mr. M. B. McMahon, Mgr. May 11, '11. Eureka Twentieth Century Dandruff Cure and Hair Tonic Co. Dear Sir—I feel compelled to issue this statement of what your medicine has done for me. It has completely cured me. My hair was falling so fast that I was afraid to comb it. My wife's was equally so bad, but after one application, the hair ceased to fall, and one 50c bottle completely cured both my wife and myself.
