George Carlin's

At a Royal Academy dinner at London on the 20th of June, 1934, George Carlin was introduced to the members of the Academy by the Earl of Halifax.

"The greatest comedian in the world today," said one of the members of the Academy, "is George Carlin."

"And he is the greatest comedian in the world today," said another member of the Academy, "because he is the only one who can make us laugh."

"And he is the greatest comedian in the world today," said a third member of the Academy, "because he is the only one who can make us cry."

"And he is the greatest comedian in the world today," said a fourth member of the Academy, "because he is the only one who can make us think."

"And he is the greatest comedian in the world today," said a fifth member of the Academy, "because he is the only one who can make us love."

The cornerstone of the Washington monument was laid on the line site which overlooks Washington, Georgetown, Arlington and Mount Vernon, by President Folsom July 4, 1848. Its marble shaft rises in all the dignity of an adorned simplicity to the height of 55 feet. The base of the shaft is fifty-five feet square, and it gradually tapers until at the 200-foot point it has diminished to less than thirty-five feet. The monument is said to contain 10,000 blocks of marble, each two feet thick. They were lifted on an elevator run by steam, suspended in an iron frame-work of iron, which was built up at intervals thirty or forty feet at a time in advance of the surrounding masonry. The monument is 1,000 feet high, was set in position Dec. 3, 1884, thirty-six years and a half after the cornerstone was laid.

The Astor's Clothes.

Our principal actor of whims was Mr. Mansfield, as has been made known variously. One whim of his related by Fritz Schmitz, the comedian.

When it came to the staging of "The First Violin" Mansfield was keen to get garments with "character" in them and found that of all places Schmitz was the one that could supply him with redingotes. He was delighted with them, introduced them and at the end of the Chicago engagement absolutely declined to return them.

The matter of getting stage clothes with character is interesting in itself. Secondhand shops supply the most, although on occasions an actor has been known to approach a laborer on the street and make him an offer for his weather-beaten coat.—Chicago Post.

Gladsone's Speech For Irving.

Gladsone was a great admirer of Sir Henry Irving, and this admiration was shown one day in the house of commons. Irving was under the gallery in the house when suddenly, with out apparent reason, Gladsone leaped to his feet and delivered an impassioned speech, set off with all the expression and dramatic gesture for which he was so famous. The house seemed surprised. Members looked at one another and murmured, "What is the old man now up to?" They thought it was some deep political game. But a week or two later a friend of Irving's, acquainting Mr. Gladsone, mentioned the actor's visit to the house, and Gladsone eagerly inquired: "What did he think of my speech? I made it for him!"

Name For the Snail.

A Texas statesman, who knows as much about poker as he does about politics and as much about politics as he does about poker, sat in a little game in New York one evening and became extremely annoyed, not to say pained, by the lamentations of a man who was losing. Finally one of the other players, also irritated by the constant wail, told the loser:

"You are one of the greatest monologists I ever listened to outside of a theater."

"He's not a monologist," said the Texan tartly. "He's a monologist." Popular Magazine.

The Snail.

The slowest creature in creation are snails and certain small beetles. Some of them habitually move only a foot or two in an hour, but this slowness is partly due to the fact that they remain motionless at intervals. By measuring the distances covered by snails when they were kept going constantly it has been found that the maximum speed of a good healthy snail is five and a half feet an hour.

Plenty of Exercise.

Powerful Reasons For Our Power

The individual, or estate, selling off power generated on the premises, suffers a disadvantage when a tenant has to be taken on who doesn't call for the use of power, and the labor charges remain constant, even though power demands of tenants is considerably below the capacity of the private power plant. All this is saved by the landlord, in such instances, is a relatively small amount of coal. However, it is therefore, must be asked whether or not the landlord suffers in competition with other power users.

When men like Wm. H. Gerstner, owner of the Corning works in Commercial Street, become purchasers of our power, the reasons above indicated, it would seem that the subject is worthy of serious consideration.
