Line offers the best transportation facilities to Mackinac and the north country, where every inch of scenery is interesting and where every little lake contains the fish that bite.

Rochester, N. Y., July 15, 1911. Editor Catholic Journal, Rochester, N. Y.

Dear Sir:
If you will allow me space in your valuable publication, I will with all possible brevity of expression relate an incident of last Saturday eve, one that was extremely disgusting to every fair-minded citizen. It was also a great surprise to many to hear a fanatic of so low a class attack the Catholic church, or any other church, with a demonstration of four calumny in public.

Walking down Main street about 8:30 my attention was attracted to a little knot of men grouped around a soap-box, on which was mounted a bow-legged, bald-headed specimen of vulgar humanity. Of course, he was in shirt-sleeve—a old game—to show he belonged to the working class.

Directing his artillery of borrowed eloquence on all sides, he started out with the usual frenzied outpouring against the political parties, capitalists and "money interests." Then he struck a new chord by approving the trusts, saying it was the "natural product of advanced civilization." Only he regretted he did not share the usual lamentable lack of common sense and logic; all their well-known cynical forebodings. The soap-box orator seeing, as all others of his miserable horde, only blue ruin for a future. And sympathized with the young man of to-day who had not the advantages that his father enjoyed fifty years ago. (He did not mention that the father worked ten hours and the son worked but eight.) No, with him things had reached such a crisis that they demanded prompt and radical attention.

He claimed the workman produced a dollar's worth of wealth for his employer at a cost of seventeen cents; and that was all he got—barely enough to keep body and soul together—while the eighty cents balance was wrested from him by the robbing capitalist armed with political power.

Coming back to the gigantic organizations of capital, to the monopolies that absorb and eliminate the small dealer, he stated that he regarded them as absolutely essential to scientific progress. He even gave an illustration of his theory, that he claimed to be very lucid and logical, to his listeners. A trust, he claimed, was "like a hammer in the hands of a skilled carpenter a useful thing; but in the hands of a thug a dangerous weapon."

Now, Mr. Soap-box Orator, can't you give another example. Is it not like a quantity of dynamite—a very useful and potent explosive—in the hands of a skilled miner; but a dangerous agent when in the hands of one of your disciples? A revolution in the hands of a man attacked by a burglar; but it proved a hellish agent in the hands of one of your pupils at the Pan-American Exposition.

I mention the last because this was the subject our soap-box orator touched on Saturday evening, saying: "Who killed Bill McKinley? A Catholic, brought up in the Catholic church. The institution that produced all the criminals of the world."

Why not tell all the truth, if it's at all possible for one of your stamp to speak truth?

Yes, the slayer of President McKinley was born of Catholic parents, but, like some few more, in early life he was led away from the church to follow your "red rag." And there, in your meeting halls, in your harbor of bobos, your hot-bed of anarchism, your incubators of criminals—you made a full-fledged murderer of him.

Then, Oh noble-minded Socialists! you say: "He learned that in the Catholic Church."

The same is true of the McNamara brothers. Born of a good family, they early in life joined the ranks of Socialism. There at the fountain-head of every evil influence known to fiendish genius, their minds begoggled by erroneous ideas of industrial wrongs; after absorbing these ideas, harmful not helpful, the McNamaras were given all possible aid and encouragement in all the devilish plots they concocted, by your men and were given the united support of your press till perjured evidence could no longer hide from the eyes of the world the guilt of your tools. You even stated that the infernal machines were built for the advancement of science, to remove the sun's spots and prevent an eclipse on the moon.

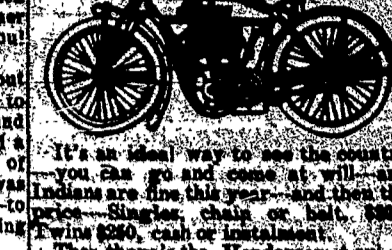

After the confessions of the wretched men, see how you twisted about and changed your tactics! The extraordinary statement came from you that McNamara Brothers inherited their criminal instincts from a Catholic ancestor. That this was increased by a visit paid once to a Catholic Church (no doubt when in quest of a quiet spot to hide their "suitcase" in) they got seized with the catholic atmosphere and began at once to plan their career of destruction of human life and property.

Nothing can be more mischievous or unfortunate for the city of Rochester than to allow this to continue. This city with its thousands of Catholics and Protestants living side by side in harmony; who's interests are identical, who each hold a healthy respect for the other's belief which has been the secret of true American progress and peace.

Yes, a man of that type is a reproach to our civilization, a protest against American fair-play, and the abandoned citizens of Rochester don't mean to tolerate him a minute. William Nolan, Rochester, N. Y.

Fine Dresses at Reduced Prices

These dresses are different from any you will see of the exclusive Fifth Ave. and Broadway shops. They were made expressly to our order and include those of the simplest character, several very handsome as well as some popular novelties in pattern, fabric and overdress effects.

Of Imported Materials Only the finest imported materials are used, such as linen, lingerie, marquisette, ratine and other summer fabrics with lace of cluny, princess shadow, filet, pleated and mesh.

A THIRD LESS The average saving on these fine dresses is at least a third.

When we opened this department a few weeks ago, our garments were marked considerably less than they usually are for, so that the reductions now are really much larger than they may appear.

The rule, however, is to carry nothing over the season. Hence they are exceptionally low prices. Original prices $15 to $40. Reduced to $9.75 and $25.
