

Her Unknown Admirer

By DOROTHEA HALE

Gwendoline Travers, who was ready to be wooed and won for a wife, met George Merryman, who straightway caught her fancy. Mr. Merryman was attentive to her for a time, then called off to slip honey from another flower. One day Mrs. Travers said "Gwen, what has become of George Merryman?" "Gone over to the enemy," "What enemy?" "Louise Childs. She has been angling for him while he has been paying attention to me and finally hooked him."

A DRY GOODS COURTSHIP

By M. QUAD

Aunt Sally Warner, as she was familiarly called by everybody, wanted a new calico dress, and she went to Smith's dry goods store in the village of Clyde to price around and beat down and finally pay the price of 7 cents a yard. She was inspecting patterns when Uncle Elias Frisbie came in. When they had greeted each other she turned her back to the calico and said: "Uncle Elias, you know I have had three husbands."
