A WOMAN'S WAY OF PROPOSING Clever Handling of a Rather Stupid Lover.

The Princess Alleen, the king roungest daughter, having five broth and three older sisters, had no hope et ever inheriting the throne. Those who are born at the wrong end of a royal family are not in an enviable po altion. The princess must needs keep up all the customs of regai estate with t ever coming to a regal inheritance Her brother, the heir apparent, was be trothed to a girl he had never seen: but as an offset if he lived long enough be would be king. The princess was expected to marry one of royal bloud, without hope of becoming a queen The matter did not especially trouble her till she took it into her head to fall in love with her tutor. His father was count, and the son would succeed to the title and estates, but he was no match for a king's daughter. No soon er did the princess discover that she wanted the hundsome and intellectual young man than the injustice of her position occurred to her. She went to her father, the king, whose pet she a, threw her arms around his neck and begged to be allowed to marry the

A Real Hero of the Sea. Children-all admire the life guards who walk the beach of our popular summer resorts and give aid to the bathers and sallors when necessary but perhaps the most heroic story of life guard is told of Patrolman Midgett of North Carolina. One day dur ing a violent storm a few years ago he was walking the beach about three miles from his own station when looking out to sea, he beheld a wreck about 300 feet from shore. Ten men were clinging to the masts, several of them more dead than alive. The hurricane was blowing a hundred miles an hour. Midgett realized that prompt action only could save these poor men but there he stood without lifeboat life preservers or any apparatus. To risk swimming out seemed suicide, yet he did it, as he was thinking of the men and his anxiety to save them from drowning. Following the next receding wave as it swept back to the wreck he reached it, grabbed the near est man and half swam and half star gered back to shore. Seven times he made this awful trip, each time bring ing in a half drowned man. The re
