An Armetica.
A lawyer was defending a man accused of housebreaking and said to the court:

"Your honor, I submit that my client did not break into the house at all. He found the parlor window open and merely inserted his right arm and removed a few trifling articles. Now, my client's arm is not himself, and I fall to see how you can punish the whole individual for an offense committed by only one of his limbs."

"That argument," said the judge, "is very well put. Following it logically, I sentence the defendant's arm to one year's imprisonment. He can accompany it or not, as he chooses."

The defendant smiled and with his lawyer's assistance unpinned his cork arm and, leaving it in the dock, walked out.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Romance of An Old Coat.

Eva Raeburn's income and leisure were strictly limited, but every year she contrived to spare from them sufficient to give a day at the seaside to a number of poor children known to her through her charitable work in Glasgow's slums.

This year she had selected Salt-coats for the scene of the annual picnic. At the appointed place of meeting the others were waiting with faces that had at least been dusted for the occasion, and in one or two instances washed.

"Where is Teddy?" asked Miss Raeburn, missing that one of her pets whom she was most anxious should have a few hours of fresh air and sunshine afar from the dismal den he called home.

But even as she spoke he appeared, and at sight of him she stood aghast.

"Teddy! What in the world—who has allowed you to appear like this?"

Teddy, the youngest and smallest of the party, shook a tangle of flaxen curls out of his great brown eyes, lifted one bare foot and set it across the other, and replied with the sublime indifference to appearance peculiar to his sex at that early age.

"My ma said I'd do fine."

"Your 'ma' is—"

Miss Raeburn snapped off her sentence abruptly. There was nothing to be gained by expressing to the child her plain, unvarnished opinion of Mrs. Edward Graham. Teddy's condition on a too plainly indicated what had been her own when she sent him forth.

A week ago she had presented herself to Miss Reyburn, bringing with her the usual environment of whiskey, and demanding information as to whether her boy was "to go on the trip as well as Mr. Paterson's Willie." Eva had delicately alluded to the deficiencies of Teddy's wardrobe, and confessed to her own lack both of funds and of wearing apparel suitable for him. It appeared that Mrs. Graham was in precisely a similar case.

"It's not my fault if he hasn't good clothes," she asserted, rather untruthfully, "if his father had done what was right, we'd never have needed to ask anything from anybody; but the way I'm placed now, I haven't a half-penny, nor a rag to put on the poor wee thing. And that's the truth I'm telling you, Miss Raeburn, so it is."

"There is enough material here to make Teddy quite a nice suit," she said. "I can lend you a pattern, if you think you can cut it out and make it; but if not—"

"Oh, I'm not just useless, Miss!" Mrs. Graham protested, clutching the garment eagerly. "You won't pawn it for me, will you?" Eva asked appealingly.

"What would I pawn it for?" demanded the other lady, in her righteous wrath. "The taste of drink never darkened my mouth, if that's what you mean. Besides," she added, after inspecting the garment more closely, with a disappointed air, "I don't believe they'd lend anything on these kind of coats."

So Eva had permitted herself to hope that Mrs. Graham's tailoring operations would keep her out of harm's way for a time, and even enable her to regain a shred of long lost self-respect, in an effort to clothe the child decently.

And here he was, his thin legs thrust into the sleeves of the coat, its tails drawn over his shoulders, crossed on his chest, and fastened behind with a huge hairpin! Passersby looked from the grotesque little figure to the tall fair girl in her modest grey garb, sweet and fresh as a flower, but brought, by the struggle against both laughter and weeping, to the verge of hysteria.

"You can't go with us today, Teddy!" Eva pronounced the sentence with some difficulty. "I can't possibly take you as you are. But you shall go another day, and soon—I'll manage it somehow. There's a penny for you, and now run home like a good boy. Come children! We've no time to spare."

Reluctantly the girl turned, painfully aware of what she was sending him back to, painfully conscious that he was standing still, staring after her, stunned by the unexpected blow, which even the presentation of a penny had failed to soften. Poor little Ted! "Oh, to be able to take him away forever from his wretched surroundings!" she thought, as the train sped on between stretches of green with sandy dunes and red-roofed golf houses.

The first glimpse of the shimmering radiance of the Firth brought shouts of delight from the children whose acquaintance with the Clyde was limited to the dark waters flowing under Glasgow bridge. And so in a glow of rapturous expectancy Salt-coats was reached.

To Lay Cornerstone of New School Sunday

The cornerstone of the building of the new Holy Apostles school at Lyell Ave., and Austin St., will be laid next Sunday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock by members of the Holy Apostles parish, with appropriate ceremonies conducted by Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Hickey, bishop of the diocese. The Holy Name Society of the church, an organization of 500 men, will escort the bishop.

It is expected that the school when erected will be one of the most modern structures in New York State. It will cost $50,000. There will be three stories, containing twelve classrooms and an auditorium seating 1,000 persons, besides various other rooms. The dimensions of the building are 118 ft. by 73 ft. It will be of red Medina stone and tapestry brick.

Rev. John F. Nelligan is pastor of the parish and the new school is being planned under his direction. Since his advent as rector of Holy Apostles in 1910, the congregation and school have advanced rapidly. The assistant to Father Nelligan is Rev. John O'Brien.

A movement is started to have the 1915 Universal Eucharistic Congress in Ireland, that is to say in Dublin. Cardinal Bourne is forwarding it.

Country Homes for Catholic Families

There are in this section of the country, a limited number of exceptionally desirable tracts of land suitable for general farming or for fruit, truck and dairy farms. Present prices are considerably below actual value, and will soon advance rapidly as land speculators are beginning to pour into the country.

To protect Catholic land seekers and to furnish them with reliable information and assistance, Rt. Rev. Jos. F. Busch, Bishop of Lead has formed the County Home Association of Western South Dakota, which society will give full information by personal letters to Catholics who can furnish first class references, if the enquirers will state what kind of farm land they desire, whether for general farm purpose or for fruit, garden or dairy.

PROCLAIMS JUBILEE

Bishop Hickey Issues Letter to Clergy Explaining Conditions for Gaining Indulgences.

Proclaiming the universal jubilee which Pope Pius X has declared for this year to commemorate the sixteenth centenary of the acceptance of Christianity by Constantine, Bishop Hickey has sent the following letter to all of the rectors of Catholic churches in the diocese of Rochester:

"Our Holy Father Pius X has seen fit to commemorate the sixteenth centenary of the freedom of the Church gained under the Emperor Constantine by proclaiming a universal jubilee, and we rejoice in sending this message of the paternal affection of His Holiness to the clergy and laity of our diocese.

"As will be seen by the letter which we hereby forward to you the conditions for gaining the indulgence of the jubilee are six visits to a church or churches, praying at the same time for the intention of the Holy Father, the reception of the sacraments of penance and the eucharist, and the giving of alms to the poor or if preferred to pious purposes. We therefore appoint as the churches for said visits the following: In the City of Rochester, the Cathedral and St. Joseph's; in Auburn, the Holy Family and St. Mary's;

"In Elmira, St. Peter and Paul's and St. Mary's;

"In Geneva, St. Francis de Sales and St. Stephen's;

"In Corning, St. Mary's and St. Patrick's;

"In Danville, St. Mary's and St. Patrick's.

"In each of the above named places three visits will be made to the two churches designated in this letter, in all other places where there is but one church six visits will be made to that church. For the benefit of those who will desire to give their alms for pious purposes, a box for alms, properly arranged, will be placed in each church with the notice that the alms given there will be applied to pious purposes and those amounts will be forwarded to the chantry to be distributed through the diocesan charities fund.

"In the case of those who are unable to perform the works or some of them mentioned for the gaining of the indulgence we refer you to the power granted to the confessor as described in the apostolic letter.

"You will, Dear Reverend Fathers, exhort your people to enter upon the performance of the works of this jubilee with the spirit of loyal and devoted children of holy mother church and of most grateful affection and all reverence for our Holy Father who has so graciously accorded to his beloved children in Christ the privilege of the Constantinian jubilee."

Mad Paul of Russia.
Russia's first Paul was no less insane than his father, Peter III, although his madness was longer in manifesting itself. So violent was his hatred of the revolutionary round hats, a fashion imported from France, that one day he sent 200 police and dragoons to scour the streets of St. Petersburg and tear them from the heads of all who wore them. He banished all the cabmen from his capital because one of them was found with a pair of pistols on him. Hundreds of his officers and courtiers were sent in chains to Siberia for a glance or a word that displeased him, many without any cause at all, and he sent an entire regiment on a 2,000 mile march because in drilling it had failed to understand one of his indistinct words of command.

Aerial Analysis.
If the late Wilbur Wright ever had a romance he managed to keep the secret, and no one seemed to know. However, he was not without views on the subject. A reporter once asked him why he had never married. "It's the easiest thing in the world to drive an aeroplane," he answered, "and it's just as easy to get married." Then he added, "Women and aeroplanes are so much alike that you can't analyze either until you get them going."

Sending the Truth.
His wife (at the other end)—Well, if you've already asked Mr. Low to dine with us I suppose I'll have to manage somehow, but you know I don't like him. He (at this end)—She says everything's all right and she'll be tickled to death to see you.—Exchange.

Strong Woman.
"Father," said little Herbert, "why doesn't mother travel with the circus?" "What could she do in a circus?" "She might be the strong woman. I heard her tell 'granda this morning that she could wind you around her little finger."—Judge.

Advance Information.
"Young man, we need brains in our business." "I know you do. That is why I'm looking for a job here."—Baltimore American.

The Fourth Dimension.
"Monday—En, what is the fourth dimension?" "Father—The one that fits every fashion. Your mother has it."—New York Sun.

Miss Helen Lucas, supervisor of drawing in the public schools of Rochester, was the next speaker. The subject of her address was "Drawing and Art Instruction." Professor Scoville, supervisor of music in Auburn, outlined a new method of teaching the fundamentals of music which has been successful.
