

THANKSGIVING FOR EVERY ONE OF US

THE THANKSGIVING GIRL

By EDGAR A. GUEST

YOU may boast of the maiden of summer
And brag of the maiden of June;
Your winter-girl may be a hummer,
To skate with and leavily spoon;
You may boast of the lassie bewitching
In hobble skirt, shawl puff and curl,
But give me the maid of the kitchen—
The reliable Thanksgiving girl.

For you be the maiden entrancing
With eyes that are soulfully brown,
I'm married and done with romancing,
Fast forty and now settled down,
No foot for the dance or the mazy,
Delightfully soul stirring whirl,
But I tell you, my lads, she's a daisy—
The gay, buxom Thanksgiving girl.

I'm forty; there's no use denying,
The lassie no longer attract
Or set me to woefully sighing,
I'm sordidly matter of fact,
I've long ceased to notice her dresses,
I'm crabbed, perhaps, and a churl,
But at forty a fellow God blesses
The gay, buxom Thanksgiving girl.

The girl who can get up a dinner
Of turkey and stuffing and pie
And set it before an old sinner—
Well, just such a sinner as I—
And smile at the kids while the carving
Is a lulu, a peach and a pearl,
Here, Nellie, although I am starving,
God bless you, my Thanksgiving girl.
—Detroit Free Press.

JOB TANNER'S THANKSGIVING DINNER

By HOPE DARING.

YOU can't give a Thanksgiving dinner this year, Brother Job. That's sure.

"Can't, hey? I'd like to know what's to blunder."

Mrs. Abigail Skinner raised her hands in horror. "Now, Job, you know the Tanner Thanksgiving dinners are noted among our relatives. You don't mean to tell me that you'd dare to give a dinner to our family—the Tanners—while Sally Long does your housework. The idea is outrageous."

Mr. Tanner made no reply. For the space of two minutes silence reigned in the sitting room of the Tanner farmhouse—a silence broken only by the ticking of the clock and the drowsy purring of the big Maltese cat as she arched her back for the slow stroking of her master's hand.

At last Mrs. Skinner spoke with a degree less than her usual assurance. "Of course I'd do most anything for you, My years of service to you have proved that. Under the circumstances I am sure Mr. Skinner will consent to overhauling the preparations. I will come Monday and—"

"Oh, I wouldn't think of putting you to the trouble," her brother interrupted her to say. "You tell about years of service. That's enough."

Mrs. Skinner's thin, dark face flushed, and she moved uneasily in the cushioned rocker. "You'll have to have my help, Job. Sally can't cook a dinner fit to set before our family."

"See here, Abigail," and into the absurd but kindly blue eyes of Job Tanner came a look his sister understood. "There's no use talking about this matter—I shall give my usual Thanksgiving dinner, and I shall not need your services."

Job Tanner had never married. In his early manhood his only sister had been left a widow with four small children. Her share of their father's property was gone, so Job unhesitatingly offered himself and family a home. For twenty years he had cared for them, educating the children and submitting to Abigail's exactions.

At last the boys and girls were all settled in life. Then their mother married Mr. Skinner. She was a grasping, covetous woman and upon learning that her new husband was a far less wealthy man than she had supposed tried to retain her olden sway over her brother's domestic affairs.

"I don't see my way out of it," Job admitted to himself. "Thanksgiving is only ten days off. Sally's good enough in her way, but she is a poor cook and no kind of a housekeeper. That was Abigail's strong point—she kept my house well. I'd as soon have Sally's work, though, as to have Abigail's scolding and whining. But it will never do to set company down to a Thanksgiving dinner cooked by Sally. Let me see—"

The November sunshine lay warm and mellow over the brown fields, heaps of russet leaves bordered the roadside, and the voices of the men at work in a field near by came to him on the clear air. His eyes swept the familiar landscape. Suddenly he started.

"If she only would! Mary's a prime cook, and they say she is glad of a chance to earn a little money. Poor Mary! It's a shame—Clemens didn't leave her enough to take care of herself. Well, I'll go over and see her this evening."

The Widow Clemens and Job had been schoolmates. There had been a time when he had hoped that they might be still more to each other, but a misunderstanding had arisen between them, and before it was explained she was the wife of Will Clemens.

The door was opened by Mrs. Clemens herself. She was a plump little woman with soft black eyes and a sweet voice.

"Why, Job, I am glad to see you. Walk in. I'll have to give you a seat in the kitchen, as there is no fire in the other room."

"How cozy you are here, Mary?" Then he plunged at once into his trouble. "He told of his determination to give his usual Thanksgiving dinner and his still firmer resolve not to accept Abigail's proffered help."

"I want you to come and plan it all," he said in conclusion. "You can have all the money to spend and all the help you want. I don't mean that you shall work hard. Will you help me, Mary?"

A delicate pink colored her cheeks. "Mrs. Skinner—what will she say?"

"It's none of her business. Say yes, Mary. I'll pay you anything you like."

She raised her head a little proudly. "Of course I will ask you no more than any one else"—she began, but he broke in gladly:

"Which means that you will come. Thank you, Mary."

All the way home Job Tanner was contrasting the cozy little house he had just left with his own spacious but lonely abode. "Meanwhile Mrs. Clemens was assuring herself that she was regarded by her late caller only in the light of a capable servant."

She went to her field of labor early on the Monday morning before Thanksgiving. Sally was a warm admirer of Mrs. Clemens and helped in her usual careless fashion. All things for which Mrs. Clemens were provided, even to a box of cut flowers from a neighboring city.

Thanksgiving morning dawned, gray and overcast. About 4 o'clock Job entered the house from the barn.

"Miss Clemens, she said for you to come in the dining room and see how things looked," was Sally's greeting.

When he opened the door he stood speechless. The old room was transformed into a bower of beauty. The bay window was filled with evergreens and adorned with yellow chrysanthemums and silver leaved begonias from Mary's home. The quaint old mahogany sideboard was filled with choice bits of china and silver, glistening molds of amber jelly, a massive silver cake basket filled with slices of rich, dark fruit cake, and a bowl of scarlet carnations. The long table was spread with fine linen and ornamented with smilax and roses. On a low vine draped stand between the side windows was a pyramid of apples, oranges and bananas.

"It all looks good enough to eat. And so do you," he went on, noting her well fitting brown gingham dress, white apron and pink ribbon at her throat. "Mary, you make my home a paradise. Stay here as my wife."

She grew very pale. Twice she essayed to speak, but the words died on her lips. It was not until he came nearer that she found her voice.

"No, no. You ask me because you are sorry for me and your home is lonely. I cannot be your wife on these terms."

"I do not see why you cannot. I will be good to you, Mary."

She smiled, although her lips quivered pitiously. "I know you would, Job. There is something else."

"Not another man?"

"Oh, no. Please don't ask any more."

"I have a right to know. You must tell me why you cannot be my wife."

There was a grave dignity in his voice that she could not gainsay. She must tell him the truth.

"Because I love you, Job Tanner. Nay, do not interrupt me. You would indeed be good to me, but I know too well the result of a union where the love is all on one side, and so I will not be your wife. Now, not a word more on the subject. I have outraged my sense of womanly pride, but you made me speak." And before he could recover from his astonishment she had taken refuge in the kitchen.

The guests began to arrive in a short time. Job had no opportunity for another word with Mrs. Clemens. One fact was plain to him—Mary had refused him.

Dinner over, there was an hour of social intercourse. Then the guests departed. When Job re-entered the house, after seeing the last load drive off, he found Sally washing the dishes.

"Where is Mrs. Clemens, Sally?" he asked.

Sally paused, dishcloth in one hand and a half washed plate in the other. "Where, indeed?" He recognized the tone as one that implied the height of Sally's displeasure. "She's gone home, driv' off by that sister of yours! Hump! I'd just like to give Abigail Skinner a piece of my mind. I come right near doin' it, but Miss Clemens—the lamb—she begged me to keep still."

A little skillful questioning put Job in possession of the facts. Mrs. Skinner had entered the kitchen and plainly expressed to Mrs. Clemens the surprise and indignation of the family concerning the widow's presence.

"Said as how they were all sayin' as how she was a throw-in of herself at your head," Sally went on. "Mary

AN APOSTROPHE TO THE TURKEY

Yet the Noble Bird is Not Essential to Thanksgiving.

TURKEY roasted good and stuffed with chestnuts and rare, served with delicious berry sauce; turkey that is in turkey and needs neither a glass of port wine nor a glass of port wine to proclaim its excellence. Thanksgiving turkey, that properly prepared and well served, does the duty of a good dinner, and is a most excellent meal without straining consciences!

That is the sort of bird that is served every table on the Thanksgiving day. Of course it is not to be found in every family, for there are expensive and times are not in these holiday times of cheer it is a poor sort of person cannot stretch his imagination enough to put a pair of wings on a juicy beefsteak. If turkeys are the limit of the poor try to get a more modest lot of chops. Just rap a fellow can't have a turkey no reason why he should be even ugly, for if he just brings himself, believe it or not, a couple of dollars are just as good as a turkey any day. Try to be happy on Thanksgiving, even if the absence of turkey does not spoil the occasion.

Why, and how, the turkey does come linked with the religious does not appear unless the good sense of old thought it but right and good to feast the stomach and the mind together and selected the turkey as the cause of its many epicurean virtues, the stomach's best friend. It is almost to know that the festival day and spread bird are associated for all time to come.

THANKSGIVING PRAYER

By CORA M. W. GREENLEAF

FILL thou my heart with gratitude today
For every friendly word and kindly smile
And see the smallest blessing 'long the way
That cheers my saddened heart a little while.

I thank thee for the sunshine and the rain;
I thank thee for my laughter and my pain;
I thank thee for the common things of life
When want and need and poverty are rife.

I thank thee, Lord, that grief can't always last;
That there's an end to sorrow's darkest day.
Then give me gratitude for pleasures past,
My joys that thou sawest fit to take away.

The treasures that were lent me for awhile
And then recalled, O help me, Lord, to smile
And say, "Thy will be done," sincere and true.
And give me work these empty hands can do.

For all my cruel sorrow and mistakes
I humbly offer thanks to thee today.
If thus I've learned to soothe a heart that aches
Or turn some wanderer's feet back to the way.

That leads to home and heaven and peace and God.
Thus only can I thank thee for the rod;
To help another mourner to bear his load.
Thus only can I learn to kiss thy cross.

THE TURKEY IN HOTELS.

Two Chefs Give Their Methods of Preparing Thanksgiving Bird.

That noble bird—the turkey struts alluringly before the vision of every housewife in the country. Rene Anard, chef at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, tells how he cooks the Waldorf turkey in the "favorite American way," as he puts it. He says:

"Begin with the stuffing. Soak sufficient bread in milk and then strain through a cloth. Mix in chopped bacon, onions, a small quantity of chopped eggs, sage, chopped parsley and salt and pepper. This is the most generally used stuffing. Of course the turkey is cooked according to size. A very large bird would take two hours and a half. A medium sized bird would take from an hour to two hours. The bird should be poured on the upside of the bird while it is cooking to produce a rich yellow color. Then there is another stuffing that we prepare on state occasions. This is a fancy stuffing, with finely chopped favored meat, truffles and Madeira wine. These ingredients are mixed with milk soaked bread."

Auguste Blason, chef at the Hotel Astor, gave the following Thanksgiving day recipe:

"Bread soaked in milk and strained. Mix in sausage meat, chopped cooked chestnuts, a bit of pork, sage and salt and pepper. Every once in awhile pour the gravy over the breast until the desired color is attained. This keeps the bird juicy."

Nevertheless these chefs declare the old fashioned way is the best and that probably American housewives know more about the cooking of a turkey than they do.

"STAY HERE AS MY WIFE"

property was gone, so Job unhesitatingly offered himself and family a home. For twenty years he had cared for them, educating the children and submitting to Abigail's exactions.

At last the boys and girls were all settled in life. Then their mother married Mr. Skinner. She was a grasping, covetous woman and upon learning that her new husband was a far less wealthy man than she had supposed tried to retain her olden sway over her brother's domestic affairs.

"I don't see my way out of it," Job admitted to himself. "Thanksgiving is only ten days off. Sally's good enough in her way, but she is a poor cook and no kind of a housekeeper. That was Abigail's strong point—she kept my house well. I'd as soon have Sally's work, though, as to have Abigail's scolding and whining. But it will never do to set company down to a Thanksgiving dinner cooked by Sally. Let me see—"

The November sunshine lay warm and mellow over the brown fields, heaps of russet leaves bordered the roadside, and the voices of the men at work in a field near by came to him on the clear air. His eyes swept the familiar landscape. Suddenly he started.

"If she only would! Mary's a prime cook, and they say she is glad of a chance to earn a little money. Poor Mary! It's a shame—Clemens didn't leave her enough to take care of herself. Well, I'll go over and see her this evening."

The Widow Clemens and Job had been schoolmates. There had been a time when he had hoped that they might be still more to each other, but a misunderstanding had arisen between

THANKSGIVING

For love that made us as the sons of God;
For all the sorrow by that great love wrought;
For burning pathways that our feet have trod;
For all ambitions which have come to naught;
For woe that made our courage true and strong;
For cruel words that stirred to self control;
For short delays that patience might be long;
For sacrifice and therefore breadth of soul;
For bitter pain and for that pain's surcease;
For all temptations by our minds abhorred;
For life, for death, and death's great daughter, Peace.
We thank thee, Lord!

—Eve Brodique.

A Real Cause For Thankfulness.

A happy maid hugged herself wildly in gloom
In the shades of the Thanksgiving night.
She laughed and exulted, with joy in her soul,
Till her face was a beautiful sight.

The great game was over. The dread she had felt
Was dispersed now by victory's sun.
The football eleven her lover belonged to
Had finished the season—and won!

—New York Times

Thanksgiving Contrasts.

THE burglar is thankful that he's out.
The politician that he's in.
The new reporter for a deal.
The seasoned gambler for a win.
The tourist that at last he's off.
The erstwhile victim that he's on.
The climber when he has "arrived."
The auctioneer when all is gone.
Some folk when with fine raiment dressed,
The turkey if he isn't dressed.
—Dunice Ward in Puck.

Thanksgiving—The Home Day

By REV. DR. N. D. HILLIS.

THANKSGIVING is the home day. It is the day for the heart and its affections. It is a day for the dreams and the ideals of youth and maiden. It is a day for youth away from home to freshen their hopes and kindle anew their aspirations.

Upon this day the son returns to his mother and the daughter to her father, together with the little flock. Upon this day the fire burns brightly on the old hearthstone, and those far off on sea or land look longingly toward the family festival, even as a bird after long travels longs for its nest. This festival of the family is wholly American, respecting no traditions, embracing no foreign custom, commemorating no hero, no epoch, no revolution. Our fathers founded this holiday that stood for the home as the typical American institution. America is the only nation in the world that has a holiday devoted to the home and the family.

THE COAST LINE TO MACKINAC

THE CHARM OF FOUR SUMMER SEAS

Send your vacation on the Great Lakes
The most economical and enjoyable outing in America
WHERE YOU CAN GO—Daily service is operated between Detroit and Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo; four times weekly between Toledo, Detroit, Mackinac Island and way ports. 10 day stopover allowed at Alpena either direction on tourist tickets without additional cost. Daily service between Toledo, Cleveland and Free-Soil Bay, during July and August, two boats out of Cleveland and Detroit, every Saturday and Sunday night.

A Cleveland to Mackinac special steamer will be operated two times weekly from June 15th to September 10th, stopping only at Detroit every trip and Ocodocin; every other week on board and Saturday down-bound, and every other week on board and Sunday up-bound.

Cleveland, during July and August, and 2nd and 3rd days for Detroit and Free-Soil Bay.

Address: L. C. Lewis, G. F. A. Detroit, Mich.
Philip H. McMillan, Free-Soil Bay, Mich.
A. A. Schmidt, Free-Press, and Gen'l Mgr.

DETROIT CLEVELAND BUFFALO FALLS TOLEDO PORT HURON GODERICH ALPENA ST. IGNACE

D&E

DETROIT & CLEVELAND NAVIGATION CO.

Fare $2.50

DAILY BETWEEN CLEVELAND & BUFFALO

THE GREAT SHIP SEANDBEE

The largest and most rapidly progressing steamer on inland waters of the world. In Service Daily. Leaves Cleveland for Buffalo and Buffalo for Cleveland every day. Magnificent Steamer SEANDBEE, Chief of Line and Chief of Buffalo.

Daily—Cleveland and Buffalo—(May 1st to Dec. 1st)

Leaves Cleveland 8:00 P.M. Arrives Buffalo 1:00 P.M.
Leaves Buffalo 8:00 P.M. Arrives Cleveland 1:00 P.M.

Passengers ready at berth with motor for all Buffalo and Cleveland points as Cleveland has the best of both worlds. Detroit and all points West and Southwest. A subject ready to pay through line between Cleveland and Buffalo accepted for transportation on C. & B. Line steamers. Ask your travel agent for details via C. & B. Line. This is a new method of transportation.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRAMWAY CO.