Wagner's Second Marriage The Parls Weekly Revue relates frem letters hitherto unpublished the exciting story of Wagner's second marriage. All the world knows that be married, after the necessary divorce, the wife of Hans von Bulow, but all the world does not know that there was a rival applicant for his heart and hand. This was Malwine Schnorr, the singer who had just created the part of Isolde in his "Tristan," and the cause of Malwine Schnorr was champloned by another artiste named latdore de Reuter, who announced herself as a prophetess, charged with a divine message to the musician. The message was to the effect that Wagner must marry Malwine and must at the same time persuade the king of Bavaria to marry Isidore berself. Wagner tells the story of his embarramment in a letter to his friend. Auguste Roecker, and it appears that he only succeeded in peacefully marrying the ady of his choice after the king had, at her request, expelled the two other ladies from his dominions.
