Job wished that his adversary had written a book, but the modern politician would be content if his adversary would write a letter.

So much attention has been given to discovering new "problems" that the work of solving some of the old ones proceeds at a halting pace.

Every time a young mother reads a description of the eugenic baby she thinks a reporter has been interviewing her infant while she was out.

Among the things that made the old fashioned winter endurable was the old fashioned woolen sock that the old fashioned woman knew how to knit.

Chicago policemen carry their revolvers in handbags. That feminine touch remains to show that doing man's work does not wholly alter woman's nature.

The sound of the human voice has been transmitted by wireless across the Atlantic. Strange as it may seem, it was not the voice of a Wall street broker calling for margins.

The high price of horses in spite of the progress of the automobile is readily understood when it is known that so much of their meat is being substituted in Paris for steer steak.

Restaurants in India are to serve butter in tubes instead of in the usual "patty" form, the European residents there evidently having learned all they care to know about the native Indian's finger prints.

Department of agriculture officials say cold storage is responsible for the high price of eggs, but the egg sellers insist that it is the fault of the hens. Neither of the explanations is wholly satisfactory to the consumer.

A Chicago woman says that 60 per cent of the men would rather contribute to the purchase of a new carpet for the church than to wear it out afterward. The other 40 per cent merely wear out the carpet and refuse to contribute to the new one.
