Knights of Columbus are doing good work in commemorating "Flag Day," although of civic origin, by patriotic exercises in or near some place of Catholic historic interest.

Rev. William J. Lannon, of Philadelphia, sounded the keynote in an eloquent address, concluding as follows:

A menace to our country? The Catholic Church brings with her all that insures the life of our Republic. She teaches the sanctity of our nation's governing power.

Welcome Home!

His many friends in Rochester were more than pleased this week to greet Bishop Edward J. Hanna and to look again into his kindly countenance.

It is indeed a privilege to meet, making possible this really hand-thrifted Rochester contribution some special number we return to the episcopate and he is the our heartfelt thanks.

Hanna—two consecrated by Bishops ever published of the progress of McQuaid, the third trained of Catholicity in this vicinity.

Outsiders See.

It is a peculiarly edifying fact that fair-minded non-Catholic's are as vigorous in their denunciation of the wave of bigotry now rampant in certain quarters of the country as are the Catholic's themselves.

For instance, here is some plain talk from a Hebrew exchange: The anti-Catholic war that is being carried on is largely for political effect, and to give inefficient preachers, and the editors of second-rate periodicals something to talk about that will interest their hearers or readers.

It would seem that any man who makes a business of defaming publicly and for hire what a large class of people hold dear and dear is courting punishment, and when he gets it, it should not be a matter for surprise and expect that it is a violation of law, there is little reason for regret.

Stand Right Up!

It is an undisputed fact that too often Catholic's are not as valiant in defense of their faith as they might be. By this we do not mean that they would not fight lustily were open war declared upon the Church but they lack the moral courage to let it be known that they wear scapulars, or scapular medals, have holy water fonts in their rooms, holy pictures in their homes, that they make novenas on the First Fridays, or invoke the intercession of the Saints.

Our Historical-Pictorial Number
