SINGING BEFORE ROYALTY.

The Port Navy Garden Found to Be the Very Hardest.

Mrs. Garden, the famous operatic singer, says that it bore her to sing before kings. Her highly personal comments on some of the royalty of Europe reproduced below are taken from an article in the American Magazine in which she gives an intimate and extended account of her experiences on the stage.

"Singing before royalty is perhaps more of a professional than a social distinction. I have done it many times, but it poses me to distraction. It is such a nuisance. I never sang for the czar. But I did sing before the English court, the old court of Edward and Alexandra. The king slept through it all, so heavy a sleep as I have ever seen. But the queen would always pat his hand at the time to applaud and he would wake up.

"The king of Greece, a brother of Alexandra, was a special friend of mine. He used often to come to where I was singing. He told his sister of his admiration for me, and she had me come to Windsor to sing. While there I would sing and converse and walk off again.

"I am afraid I'm an anarchist in my heart. I don't love to courtiers. There are some who are not kings—such as Marconi, who has done big things to whom I would go down on my knees because of their achievements, but I just had to get my courage in my two hands to court to the king of England. It went against me."

ADDING MACHINES.

They Are Not New, as Pascal Invented One in the Year 1642.

The adding machine is of modern development, but not a modern invention, a possible one having been invented in 1642 by Pascal (1623-1662), a celebrated French mathematician, philosopher and writer. Later, in 1820, the adding machine was modified to facilitate multiplication by Gottfried Wilhelm Leibnitz, a German mathematician of great achievement, and his invention was followed by many improvements.

A notable experimenter in this line was Charles Babbage (1792-1871), an English mathematician, many years professor of mathematics at Cambridge university. In order to secure accuracy in tables of logarithms he conceived the idea of doing the work by machinery and was commissioned by the British government to superintend the construction of a machine for the purpose. He spent much time and money in experimenting and attained some remarkable results, but died before perfecting his machine.

All calculating machines contain certain features devised by special reference to the work to be done, including circular metallic disks, wheels with teeth, etc., ingenious, but not more complicated and no more responsive to human intelligence than many other machines. The thinking is all done by the operator.—Philadelphia Press.

The Australian Blacks.

It is believed by many persons that the blacks in Australia are dying out. As a matter of fact, says a correspondent of the London Standard, no such thing is happening. The belief, however, is easily explained. As civilization advances, and it is yearly advancing, the blacks recede farther and farther into the back blocks and unknown country, save a few who have acquired the craving for opium or drink. These latter succumb amid the advancing wave of civilization and seldom leave any children. Those who have passed inland, if they do not increase, have certainly not decreased. In some few cases whole tribes have died out when civilization has reached them, but these have usually been small tribes.

Foundation of a Fortune.

The late William Gibson, who left a fortune of half a million pounds, was, when a little watchmaker in Belfast, one day examining a watch which had been sent to him for repair. It was during the time of the Belfast riots. A stone was thrown through the shop window and hit Mr. Gibson in the eye. Under the malicious damages act Mr. Gibson was awarded £3,000. This was his start in life.—London Sporting Times.

In Formosa there is a tree between 2,500 and 3,000 years old, with a circumference of sixty-five feet and the lowest branches forty-five feet from the ground. The tree is a species of cypress, the Japanese beniki.

Jealousy.

"May's new hat is perfectly hideous."
"It isn't a bit more hideous than mine. You're always saying nice things about May."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Missed It.

The prodigal son wrote the old man as follows: "I got religion the other day. Send me $10." But the old man replied: "Religion is free. For get the wrong kind."

The impure, the deceiving and the uncharitable extrude themselves from eternal bliss by their unfitness for enjoying.—Burns.
