THE SEA OF LOT.

Its Ridge of Sodom and Its Fetid but Clear Blue Waters. It is the southeastern part of Palestine where the famous Dead sea is known as the Sea of the Plain or Salt sea, but it is known today by the Arabs as the Sea of Lot.

The Dead sea is fed by the river Jordan from the north, but has no outlet, depending entirely upon evaporation. A portion of the sea is surrounded by cliffs which are destitute of vegetation.

Its proportion of saline matter is so great that it contains more than eight times as much as the ocean, and while it is exceedingly fetid, yet its water is as blue as that of the Mediterranean and to the bath it is very refreshing, and owing to its specific gravity it is difficult to sink. Nothing living exists within the waters of the Dead sea - Buffalo Express.

UTAH'S NATURAL BRIDGE.

The Secret of Its Origin Somewhat Purposes the Scientists. What is thought to be the largest natural bridge in the world is that of southwestern Utah, known as the George natural bridge. The total length of this great work of nature is about 100 feet; its width - i. e. the roadway - is about thirty-five feet; the span in the clear is about ninety feet.

Scientists are somewhat perplexed to explain the means by which nature produced this bridge. It is thought hardly possible that it could have been created by water erosion, unless, as was most unlikely, there was a very large and swift stream flowing at the point where the brook now runs.

Although long known to the Indians, it was not until about fifteen years ago that white men became familiar with the sight of it. Mining prospectors were the first of the whites to see it, since it is located in the heart of a very rugged and inaccessible region.
