A Burglary By EDITH V. ROSS

Gladys Denton was the daughter of an English couple who were related to members of the nobility and had lived in affluence. Speculation on the Stock Exchange took all they possessed—except enough to get them to America, where her father made an uncertain living. It was a dream with him to get back to England and with sufficient means to resume his former position.

This being the case, it was quite natural that every young man who came to visit Gladys was looked upon with misgivings by her parents. The halcyon days of the family in England were a blank to her. That her mother had employed half a dozen servants and had ridden in her carriage was, as far as she was concerned, ancient history.

But lovers cannot live simply as lovers; they must possess each other. Gladys, knowing that for her to confess that she had met and loved a man with nothing but a salary barely sufficient to enable a couple to get on would bring the dreams of years crashing about her parents' heads, would neither consent to marry Edmonds openly nor clandestinely.

Then followed meetings and communications made difficult by the watchfulness of Mrs. Denton; and the greater the obstacles the more impassioned the love; the more impassioned the love the greater the risks taken. Finally Gladys wrote her lover that she was to be removed.

"My child," exclaimed her mother, "there is nothing to fear! The wretch has gone, but he has taken your watch."

"It seems to me," said Mrs. Denton, scrutinizing her son-in-law, "that I have seen you somewhere before."

For the Children

One of the features at a recent water carnival held at College Point, N. Y., was the swimming feats of Miss Katherine Brown, the 17-year-old daughter of Commodore Al Brown, the champion long distance swimmer of the world.

A Potato Race. Children of all ages (except the baby) enjoy greatly a potato race. Two rows of potatoes are laid along the ground for a distance of a hundred feet or so, placed five feet apart. A basket or pail is placed at the end of the row from which the contestants start.

Hidden Pet Puzzle. By taking the initial letter of a syllable word from each of the following sentences and writing them together correctly the name of a certain kind of four footed pet will be spelled: Aim at the sun and you'll reach the moon.

Riddle. I may be made of brass, paper or wood. I may live for a century or be easily defaced and lost. I am given as a token of love, and yet the sight of me may cause sorrow.

Fern Dust. We tiptoed through the forest One bright midsummer night, And there we found a clearing Aglow with fairy light.

Character Forming In Youth.

It was a saying of Froebel's that the character of a man or woman is fixed at six years of age, thus putting the formation period very early in the development of the child.

One modern mother, though possessed of ample means, refused to employ a regular nurse. She takes entire charge of her two little children, a girl of four and a boy of two.

Determined that her children should never be helpless, she has taught these little nites to look after themselves in quite a wonderful way.

The paternal mother whose motto is quoted above obtained a kindergarten table such as that on which the children play their games.

They are very earnest about this task of setting table, and woe betide the child whose dishes are not set in the proper order by the waitress or waiter of the day!

For the Housekeeper's Fit. According to the September Women's Home Companion September is the month for all housekeepers.
