The American Negro's First Educator.

Catholic Church Played This Role Says Authority.

The Logic of Georgia's Action

The commonwealth of Georgia has further blackened its hitherto not too immaculate record by a piece of legislation which prohibits the teaching of negroes by people of white color, aimed directly at the work of the Catholic priests and sisters among the black men of the South. In this action, Georgia is in complete accord with her past, which has been one continued struggle against the education of the blacks and against the efforts of Catholics in particular in that direction. As early as 1740 the teaching of negroes had been forbidden by that state, and this has been supplemented at other times by further legislation. (See "Digest of the Laws of the State of Georgia" by Marbury and Crawford, p. 438).

This hatred of the negroes and the Catholics has in it a fatal logic, for it is influenced by the memory of the past, which shows the Catholics to have been the first in this country to have endeavored to raise the black people from their state of degradation to some stage of enlightenment. In the recently published interesting book by Dr. C. G. Woodson, "The Education of the Negro Prior to 1861" (G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1915), we have the record of this fact, and also the testimony that the Catholic Church ever consistently continued in this course, even in the face of violent race persecution.

"The Spanish and French missionaries," we read in the Introduction, "set an example which influenced the education of the Negroes throughout America. . . . Being anxious to see the Negroes enlightened and brought into the Church, they courageously directed their attention to the teaching of their slaves, provided for the instruction of the numerous mixed-breed offspring, and granted freedom to the educational privileges of the highest classes. Put to shame by this noble example of the Catholics, the English colonists had to find a way to overcome the objections of those who, granting the enlightenment of the slaves might not lead to servile insurrection, nevertheless feared their conversion might work manumission." (p. 3) "It was not until the French provided that masters should take their slaves to church and have them indoctrinated in the Catholic faith, that the proposition was seriously considered by many of the Puritans. They, like the Anglicans, felt sufficient compunction of conscience to take steps to Christianize the slaves, lest the Catholics, whom they had derided as undesirable churchmen, be in a position to put the Protestants to shame." (p. 23, 42) The early burg, Md., will sail for France, and demand will go to Pau to live permanently. The Archbishop has just placed in the hands of his printer the manuscript for his memoirs, which will appear early in December in book form.

The Rev. Edward J. Walsh, fifty-one years old, for thirteen years assistant pastor of St. Mary's Church, Norfolk, Va., died suddenly on September 5, at St. Vincent's Hospital. Father Walsh was one of the best-known priests in Virginia, and was the founder of the Young Men's Association in Norfolk.

The Very Rev. D. T. Lanslot, O. S. B., who for many years did missionary work in the United States and who was appointed three years ago Prefect Apostolic of N. Transvaal, sailed September 7 from New York for his distant post. He has been visiting the United States in the interest of his mission.

Every year the English government issues a report giving the number of lives lost in India by the attacks of wild beasts and serpents. These statistics are horrifying. The poor natives form the principal victims, as they go barefooted and are moreover not allowed to carry firearms. The report states that 2,382 persons have been killed by ferocious beasts—tigers, leopards, bears, elephants, hyenas, jaguars and wild dogs. Venomous snakes claim 22,000 victims, and over 100,000 head of cattle have been destroyed by wild beasts and snake bites.

The Lyons Society for African Missions counts 314 members who have sacrificed their lives for the salvation of Africa's negroes.

Since the year 1894 the territory of Alaska has been a Prefecture Apostolic. It is three times the size of France. Its population is about 70,000, of whom 15,000 are Catholics, and 10,000 Russian schismatics. There are 28 Catholic centers served by 20 Jesuit priests, Brothers of Ploermel and Sisters of Providence of St. Anne and St. Ursula are in charge of the few parish schools, which have an attendance of about 1,000 children.

From the Philippine Islands come numerous letters expressing heartfelt thanks for the aid given by American benefactors. Bishop O'Doherty of Zamboanga, says:

"Your help is more valuable now than at any time before, as the war affects the poor priests of this diocese, though so far away from the scene of operations. I pray God to bless you and those who enable you to assist us, though you have so many calling for help."

Fr. Henry Raymakers, Superior of the Belgian missionaries at Bagyo, writes:

"I received your timely assistance with heartfelt gratitude. The greatest difficulty here, in a financial way, is to pay our teachers and feed the children in the catechumenate schools. Many are going to the Protestant schools, as we are unable to receive any more in our establishment."

The Church in Switzerland has suffered a heavy loss by the death of Mgr. Andre Bovet, Bishop of Lausanne and Geneva, who died on August 3 in the fiftieth year of his age and the fourth year of his episcopate.

Lourdes Continues To Be A City of Healing.

Surgeons Treat War-Wounded In Twenty-two Hospitals.

For the first time in the half-century that Lourdes has been the miracle-working capital of the world no pilgrimages have come to her this year from any quarter of the globe, says a Paris press correspondent. The innumerable processions have given place to the individual pilgrim, who has come to pray for the one miracle that occupies France's mind—that his or her dear ones shall pass through the dangers of war unscathed.

Lourdes however, has not ceased to be a city of healing. Its marvelous organization is devoted to caring for those it has christened the "pilgrims from the front." Lourdes is used to receiving trainloads of sick, so wounded soldiers arriving find perfectly trained bearers and expert service, instead of the untrained, ungrudging attention they meet at other towns. With what may appear to the scoffers a want of confidence in the healing powers of their grotto's water, every modern scientific medical and surgical resource is provided by the authorities of the city.

Those who have visited Lourdes will not be surprised to hear that twenty-two hospitals were fitted up in a very short time in the city and its immediate vicinity, which can accommodate 2,700 wounded.

St. Bernard's Seminary Opens With Record Class

With the largest registration in the history of the institution, St. Bernard's Theological Seminary in Lake Avenue Boulevard was opened Monday afternoon, 243 students registered.

A retreat to be given by the faculty professors began Tuesday evening and continued until Saturday morning, when the order of Mass will be conferred on twenty candidates in the coming graduating class, who were made subdeacons last June. Bishop Thomas F. Hickey will officiate at the ordination.

Rev. George Kettell of the Class of 1914 has been appointed a member of the seminary faculty by Bishop Hickey. No other changes were made in the faculty. Father Kettell will teach in production to sacred scripture.

Nearly 33 dioceses in the United States are represented in the student body this year. Three seminarians are from the newly established diocese of Winona, Minn.

Announcement was made that the annual blessing of graves in Holy Sepulcher Cemetery will take place on Sunday afternoon September 26. Bishop Hickey will officiate. He will be assisted by priests of the diocese and seminarians from St. Bernard's.

A Shipwreck Brings Misfortune To An Arctic Mission.

Living in the Solitudes of The North, Where a Steamer Comes Only Once a Year With Supplies, It Can Be Imagined How Great a Blow the Loss of That Vessel Would Be.

This crushing disaster has happened to Bishop Breynat, O. M., Vicar Apostolic of the Mackenzie district, Northwest Territory. He had journeyed to Fort Smith to receive provisions intended for several of his missions. Arriving there he learned that the Hudson Bay steamer carrying the goods had been wrecked while shooting the rapids of Peace River. The report added that all the cargo, which was valued at several thousand dollars, had been lost, without hope of rescue.

It is not necessary to expatiate on this disaster, coming, as it does, in the midst of the general hard times. The very life of some of the posts is involved, and the distress of the people dependent upon the missionaries will be correspondingly great.

Explaining China's Growth in Catholicity.

The extraordinary growth of the Faith in China has often been commented on of late. Fr. Sylvester Epelago, O. F. M., writing in The Ecclesiastical Review, explains it as follows:

"From 700,000 in 1900, the number of Catholics in China has grown to 1,600,000 in 1914.

"There are four reasons or causes," he says, "which might suggest to explain this great development; first, the blood of martyrs; second, increased fervor throughout the Catholic Church brought about by the decrees of Pope Pius X. on frequent Communion and the early Communion of children; third, an increase in the number and activity of priests and nuns in China; fourth, an increase of the movement to help foreign missions, a zeal noticeable in the world at large and especially in the United States."

In the ancient Church of SS. John and Paul, Rome, the Rev. P. Meelen, a member of the Passionist Congregation, was recently consecrated Bishop of Nicopolis, Bulgaria. The new Bishop is a Hollander by birth and a missionary of wide experience.

Since the great war the Religious of the Sacred Heart, having to change the mother house from Brussels, have established it for the time being at Villa Lante, Rome. On August 14 seventeen nuns made their final solemn vows before Cardinal Merry del Val, the Protector of their society, and on the 15th, sixteen others performed the same solemn act before Cardinal Biletti. The newly confirmed professed have left Rome for their convents in different parts of the world.
