A Quick Transition

By EUNICE BLAKE

"Howdy, Amanda? Excuse me for not comin' sooner when you sent to say you wanted to see me, but I was workin' at the cider press."

"Come in, Mr. Morehouse. It's gittin' chilly nights now. I got some logs burnin' on the hearth, and I'll bring you some birch beer from the cellar."

Josh Morehouse, a bachelor of forty, accepted the invitation and was soon sitting on one end of a sofa drawn before the fire, while Amanda Waters, aged twenty, sat at the other.

"Law sakes, Mr. Morehouse, I don't believe I can."

"Waal, now, that's surprisin'!"

"There's somethin' I want you to do for me, but it's awful hard to say it. Fact is, I want to borrow you for awhile."

"Borry me?" Mr. Morehouse gazed while crackling a nut and looked at Miss Waters inquiringly.

WHEN LETTERS WENT ASTRAY

A Near Tragedy That Was Happily Averted.

College student sits in his room smoking and writing letters.

"First letter, Percy Walker to his uncle, Samuel Walker."

"My Dear Uncle, I write this my forthrightly letter to you to tell you that I am still doing very well in my classes—studying hard, devoting my whole time to my college duties."

"Be assured, my dear uncle, of my affection for you and my aunt and believe me, your devoted nephew, 'PERCY.'"

"Dearest Percy, I have just written to you to stop till I light a pipe and I have to tell you the glorious news that I am first in winter practice in tennis and have won a place in the university crew."

"By the bye, I was forgetting to tell you that I gave a dinner in my room last week. The gang was too high mucky muck for pipes, so I had to buy a box of cigars."

"Dearest Percy, You naughty boy, you have sent me by mistake a letter to your uncle. Great Scott, I must have sent her letter to uncle's. Oh how I laughed when I read it!"

"Dear Percy, Yours of the 15th just received. Your handwriting is so good that I can't read it. I suppose it is a request for money, so I enclose a check for $100. Your affectionate 'UNCLE.'"

"Percy—Don't get out of your room if you can't help it. These damp spring mornings. There is a great deal of pneumonia about."
