

Damon and Pythias

How Two Old Bums Worked a Crowd.

By M. QUAD

Just after breakfast the other man...

"Did you get anything?" "Not a red..."

"Whereupon the big bum whistled half around..."

"Slick, now, but what's the matter here?"

"Without proper consideration is the risk..."

"I guess I have," replied the little man...

"You are a good man," said Pythias...

"I'm not sure that I could well say..."

"I'm not sure that I could well say..."

"I'm not sure that I could well say..."

"I'm not sure that I could well say..."

"I'm not sure that I could well say..."

A Biter-Bit

By F. A. MITCHEL

It is obvious from this story that the story teller was a young man bent on an adventure.

One morning the postman left me a letter with the firm name of Outenut Hardy & Dunn.

Your proposition to me is a proposition so long in legal dispute by many that the attention has been referred to her with our assurance that the lawyer between the two cases will be a lawyer except by such a title.

It was evident to me that the letter doubtless intended for me. I had closed my photograph in a note stating in substance the note I had to cover from the attorneys and adding that I did not come to see further through them, but would be pleased to form her acquaintance direct.

In due time I received a note signed Bertha. At this time she was the recipient of my photograph and enclosing one of her own. It represented a young girl of eighteen years of age, pretty as a peach and in whose eyes I struck an inexhaustible fund of mischief.

Without proper consideration is the risk...

I went to see her. She came into the room smilingly and extended her hand which I grasped and pressed. We became acquainted without the slightest reference to the subject of the union of property and so far as the first meeting was concerned, made no progress in coming to an understanding with regard to a union of properties.

For the moment we should enter into details I would betray myself. On leaving I asked permission to call again, which was graciously accorded.

So delighted was I with my success that on my second visit to Miss Anthonie's I ventured to mention the object of my calls. She dropped her eyes to the floor and said that she feared the matter could be considered she must take time to herself.

She could not make any definite promise concerning me. She would only say that she would consider the matter more fully.

She would only say that she would consider the matter more fully.

JEFF'S TESTIMONY

Borrowing money from friends has caused a number of men of splendid mentality to absolutely lose their memory.

The annual search for Guy Fawkes in the cellar of the houses of parliament may soon cease to be an empty form.

Did you ever think what a lot of good you might have done had you begun yesterday instead of waiting until tomorrow?

Dr. Duncan McDougall, who is weighing souls, probably has not yet come to one of those persons who are said to have no souls.

Announcements of its appearance come so frequently as to suggest that the "shortest-year locus" has got mixed in its mathematics.
