

Trade— Foreign and Domestic

There is, at present, a great deal of comment about our very important trade with other nations, as well as the improvement in our domestic commerce.

The New York Central Lines alone carry more passengers and more goods annually than all of the ships of the leading maritime nation of the world.

The New York Central Lines are the great connecting link between the East and West, with frequent, fast and safe train service. Along this great highway of Commerce, men and merchandise move from place to place with assurance of

Christmas at Christ's Birthplace

At last I am come to the market place, at one end of which stands the Church of the Nativity, marking the holy, lowly birthplace, says a writer in Army and Navy Life. There is only one entrance from the street, and it is so low that in entering one is forced to bow the head and assume a posture of reverence. When once inside I raise my eyes I feel the lashes wet.

The ceiling is lofty, the walls white-washed and bare, while the ancient dark beams and rafters add to the air of extreme simplicity. There are long rows of marble pillars, once adorned with paintings, that are all-but-faded now, and of the once glittering mosaics of the clerestory only fragments remain. Coming into the choir and apse, the scene is suddenly changed. There are numerous altars of diverse ownership under a consistent and jealous guardianship of Latin, Greek and Armenian. Over these various claims there has been much and bitter discussion; blood has been spilled more than once. In fact, as all the world knows, the Crimean war began with a mob riot in the Church of the Nativity—sacrilege of sacrilege—and here was born the Prince of Peace!

Down the dark and winding stairs, slippery with the drippings of coats

BEND LOW AND KISS THE GROUND FOR CHRIST'S BARK

less candles I make my way to that lowly place into which first came the light of the world. The grotto of the Nativity is a cavern beneath the church, long, narrow and low celled, with pendent lamps of precious metal and rare workmanship lighting the gloom. The floor is marble, and wonderful old tapestries, pictures and silk hangings cover the walls. A marble cradle in one corner commemorates the manger, and in a recess on one side a dozen or more hanging lamps are ranged around in a half circle.

Before the altar there all men bend low and kiss the ground for Christ's sake, for it is here a silver star is set to mark the birthplace of him whom his mother called Jesus. The center of the star is glass, and through it one may see the original rocky floor of the stable. To the north of the grotto underneath the floor one may also see the cave in which St. Jerome spent many peaceful years translating the Bible into Latin.

The effect of the whole is impressive but in an unfamiliar way. I am conscious of a feeling that is almost resentment against the lamps and tapestries and the marble floor. They seem to level to the cheapness of worldly riches a spot that, of all places on earth, should have been allowed to remain tranquilly humble and dimly sacred, true to the character of its holy, transcendent memory.

I close my eyes for a moment, while mind and heart rebel against the present, until it vanishes and the atmosphere of the past, in all its deep and wondrous mystery, returns to envelop my soul. "I am here, in Bethlehem," I whisper to myself, and beyond closed lids I see the Virgin mother with her gentle face as the old masters loved to picture her and a "light that never was on land or sea" in her beautiful mother eyes, while the glory from one low hanging star touches a baby's hair. The fragrant scent of new hay is in my nostrils, I hear the soft breathing of nearby cattle, and above the murmur of pilgrims' prayers the voice of the Magi is saying, "Lo, we have seen his star in the east and are come to worship him."

To Light Yule Log Properly. There are thousands who still firmly believe that to light the Yule-log with the charred remains of its predecessor of a year ago means twelve months of good luck for the provident household and his family. But it has always been considered an evil omen if a quaking person, a barefooted person or, worst of all, a fat footed woman enters the room while the log is burning.

Beginning Right.
Papa he has been a-sayin'
"We should start the new year right,
An' not quarrel in our playin',
An' mind mamma day an' night,
An' he said there's no disputin'
That whatever we might do
On the first day, sure as shootin',
We would do the whole year through.

An' I saw the chance was splendid
To do something right away
That, until the year was ended,
I would like to do each day.

An' on New Year's, startin' squarely,
I got up soon as 'twas light
An' learned all my lessons fairly,
So's I'd always have them right.
