A Great Catholic Scientist And His Work

Louis Pasteur's Faith And The Lesson Which It Teaches.

His Nation's Glory And Its Shame.

In the latest issue of the National Geographic Magazine (Vol. XXVIII, No. 5), in an article on "The World's Debt to France," we read the following: "It was he: Pasteur who established the germ theory of disease and through whom the wonderful miracles of saving human life that have characterized the past third of a century, have been wrought. The normal death rate of civilized countries before the days of Pasteur was about 30 per thousand of population. Today it is about 15 per thousand in the more progressive nations. Think what the saving of 15 lives a year for every thousand of population means when applied to half the earth! It means the averting of 12,000,000 deaths annually. It means more than 25,000,000 cases of illness avoided. It means health and happiness in 20,000,000 homes rather than disease and distress. Who can estimate the benefits to humanity of the wonderful discovery of Pasteur?" (p. 501.)

This accomplishment to which reference is thus made was the crowning achievement of the many brilliant works of a man who received more recognition perhaps than any scientist in his lifetime ever has, and yet who ever found in his studies and investigations, the deep and overwhelming proof of the Faith that was his. The fidelity of Louis Pasteur to the Catholic Church and his firm belief in God were but strengthened by the science into which he delved. "The more I know," he declared, in a phrase which has often been repeated, "the more nearly my faith that of the Breton peasant. Could I but know all I would have the faith of a Breton peasant woman."

Alas! how much is it to be regretted that the country from which Pasteur came has not heeded the example of its great son. The men in control of its destinies have systematically set about to destroy religion. Thirty-six years ago one of its false leaders pointed to "clericalism" as the enemy to be crushed, and a short time ago, at the end of a long series of unjust legislative acts, against the Church the man who but lately held its chief place of power proudly declared that "the lights had been put out in the heavens." In a pamphlet issued over a year ago by the Catholic Truth Society of Ireland the various measures passed against religion in this campaign are set forth in detail.

The glory of France has been her Catholic past, and that which still remains of it among the passants of Brittany. This is shown, inadvertently but none the less forcibly, in another article on "The Beauties of France" in the same magazine from which quotation has been made. Her shame has been the rejection of her Catholic traditions, her bitter warfare on the Church, and the acceptance of that false morality which has stamped her as the childless nation of Europe. Per time in the hour of her pain, defeat, and humiliation, she may finally decide to cast aside the "false prophets" who have misled her and to turn once more to the Church for the regeneration field of her children.

Foreign Mission News

Special correspondence by The Propagation of the Faith Society 148 Lexington Ave., New York City.

At the last Consistory Mgr. Augouard, Vicar Apostolic of Upper French Congo was made titular Archbishop of Cassiope. This is in recognition of his thirty-eight years' apostolate in Africa, during twenty-five of which he served as Vicar Apostolic.

Fr. Herbert J. Parker, S. J., a former professor at Holy Cross College, Worcester, Mass., has been sent to Bombay, India, to help fill the vacancies in high schools and colleges caused by the internment of the German Jesuits. The latter have had charge of higher educational work in Bombay for fifty years.

There are two orders of colored Sisters in the United States: The Oblates of Divine Providence, and The Sisters of The Holy Family. They number about four hundred members.

Out in China there is a little chapel that holds 300 persons, while the congregation numbers over 3,000. The same state of affairs exists all over the mission world. The poor native huts which mark the beginning of apostolic effort among pagans soon become too small for any use, which explains the constant demands being made for new churches and chapels.

Fr. Cesaire Stern, O. F. M., a missionary in Fangtse, China, says:

"Thanks to the relative peace which reigns in China, conversions are multiplying in all parts of the country. The greatest aid to this movement is the schools, for the Chinese love education. In their growing desire for knowledge they are following the example set by the Japanese, whose methods of teaching they also wish to imitate."

In a corner of China called Linchow Fr. C. Poulhazan, P. F. M., has for four years been trying to build a chapel in honor of the Blessed Virgin. As he has not succeeded during the five years, it is doubtful if he will do so in the lean years. However, he humbly presents his request for aid, and states that in return his Christians will pray fervently for their American benefactors.

What One Apostle Has To Contend With.

On the frontier of Tonkin there is a settlement of outlaws drawn from the provinces of Kwang-tong and Kwang Si. These brigands have sought to evade the civil laws of their own country in order that they may obey only their own wild instincts. A less hopeful spot for the foundation of a Catholic mission could hardly be imagined, but an intrepid priest has taken up his abode among the robbers and hopes to convert at least a few of them.

The name of this apostle is Fr. Grandpierre, P. F. M., and he has not only opened a hospital, but founded an asylum of the Holy Childhood, managed by native Sisters. This work is most necessary, as infanticide is much practiced in the district. By saving the babies and bringing them up as good Christians the seed will be sown and later on the pious maidens will become the founders of Catholic families.

So, in spite of difficulties apparently insurmountable, Fr. Grandpierre is making his way into the confidence of his wild flock, and he is far from being discouraged with results so far obtained, but at least he needs our prayers.

The first diocese synod in this country was that of Baltimore in 1791. Twenty priests constituted the first Provincial Council of Baltimore was held in 1829. Sixty bishops constituted it.

Indictments were returned against the corporation and Wilbur Phelps, Bruce M. Phelps, Theodore G. Walker, and Marvin Brown, alleged to be connected with the corporation, in Joplin, Mo., on January 13, 1915.

Six counts in the indictments were leveled at items alleged to have been distributed through the United States mails by the Menace Publishing Company. The seventh count concerned certain messages in a book entitled "The Pope, Chief of White Slavers: High Priest of Iniquity," of which the defendants were charged with being the distributors. Nun Makes an Affidavit on the Mexican Outrages

Priests And Nuns Have Been Shamefully Mistreated.

In connection with Mr. Tumulty's letter of Nov. 27th, dealing with the Mexican situation in which he declared that there was no official record of outrages committed against religions in Mexico—two affidavits have been made public, tending to establish the fact that mistreatment of nuns has been the customary procedure followed by Carranza forces. One of these affidavits was made by a Sister in the presence of five other nuns, with the signatures of two American army officers as witnesses, whose names will not be made public.

The head sister, Mother Ellen del Salvador, residing formerly in Queretaro, but driven out of there with the rest of the sisters by the constitutionalist authorities to Aguas Calientes, where they were again driven out by the governor of the state, Puenca, declared that she is herself stopping in Vera Cruz, because the sisters of the republic, whether cloistered or of simple teaching orders, have been obliged to leave their convents, and to take refuge in private homes, being exposed to all kinds of dangers, from which several of them could not save themselves; but almost all of the religious sisters were given only one-half hour to leave their convents, and the others were taken over to barracks or police stations, where their vow of chastity was exposed to danger; others were forced to serve the Mexican Red Cross under the pretext of taking care of sick or wounded, but instead were given hard manual labor, being treated more like slaves than anything else, obliging them to grind corn and wash clothes, and some even to live with soldiers as if already married to them.

"She declared furthermore that she has seen with her own eyes over twenty religious sisters kept in certain hospitals in Mexico City; and who had been violated and were about to bear children. There are many others who, through some feeling of revenge, have been stolen away.

"She states that she saw over 40 Catholic priests, who were obliged to leave the Spanish consulate, where they had taken refuge, after having been flogged heavily, treated badly either by words or cruel deeds, being shot in cages as if they were beasts.

"Other sisters who were present declared facts similar to the ones already mentioned."

Affidavit No. 2—"I personally saw and spoke with a number of nuns who were in the hospital and who had fled from the north, after having been outraged by revolutionists; there were 81 of these nuns in the institution. There was another hospital with more nuns, but I do not know the name of it. The nuns in the hospital near me were about to become mothers. That fact would be impossible for any one seeing them to ignore. In fact there condition was known all over the city of Mexico. Three or four children were born to these nuns while I was there. I learned from others that other nuns in the same condition had gone to their homes."
