COUNT APPONYI IS A STATESMAN

Eloquent Orator With Command of English.

When the name of Count Albert Apponyi, the veteran Hungarian leader, was first put forward to fill the vacant post of Austro-Hungarian ambassador to the United States the occasions of his visits to this country were recalled.

Count Apponyi is one of the most distinguished of the European statesmen of today. An eloquent orator, with a singularly striking command of English, he has won the respect of the many Americans who have heard him speak during his visits to the United States. He comes of a family that traces its descent from King Bela IV.

of Hungary and has played an important part in the destinies of his native land.

Count Apponyi led movements for the development of Hungarian commerce and agriculture and for the checking of Russia's ambitions in the Balkan peninsula. He is noted for his democratic ideas and practices and for his advocacy of international peace. Since 1872 he has been a member of the Hungarian parliament and was president of it from 1872 to 1904. He was formerly minister of public instruction, privy councillor, member of the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague and member of the inter-parliamentary union.

WASH DAY IN THE TRENCHES.

Soldiers Gather Soiled Clothing and Give It Vigorous Scrubbing.

One day a week is set aside in the trenches in northern France as "wash day." On that day the soldiers gather all their soiled clothing and give it a vigorous scrubbing. Some of the men could give housewives pointers on the method of getting the heavy dirt from clothes.

Wash day generally is followed by a night of music and song. There are many good singers among the men in the trenches, and it is a poor camp that does not boast of one or two musicians. The story is told that at one of these concerts, when the air was still and clear and the voice carried, a youth with a fine tenor voice started to sing. From a trench in the far distance there came a plaintive call. It was the youth's father. He had been led to believe that his boy was dead. His voice didn't carry, and another in the father's camp through a megaphone asked if the singer was Willie of the British regiment. When the answer was megaphoned back that it was there was a fervent "Thank God" from the other end of the line. The two camps then joined in the singing of the song.

SIRENS AND SONS.

Thomas F. Ryan, like President Wilson, is exceedingly fond of detective stories.

Edwin V. Morgan, American ambassador to Brazil, has presented to the Widener library at Harvard 600 volumes of Brazilian history and literature.

Professor Charles Vancouver Plight, known as the "grass man" of the department of agriculture, is responsible for the introduction of Sudan grass in this country, through which a remarkable revision of land values in some parts of Texas has already been created.

Professor Theodore W. Richards of Harvard, to whom has been awarded the Nobel prize for chemistry, is director of the Gibbs memorial laboratory, is author of papers on the significance of changing atomic volume and has revised the atomic weights of oxygen, copper and other elements.

Count Zeppelin, Germany's air king, was in such poverty in his early years that he was obliged to live in a little cottage on an allowance made to him by his friends. At thirty years of age he married a lady belonging to one of the German aristocratic families. For more than thirty years Count Zeppelin devoted himself to the construction of flying machines.

PITH AND POINT.

The wages of sin are always promptly paid.

How much easier it is to avoid debtors than creditors!

It's easier to get people to take your advice than to make them use it.

A man's good opinion of himself never gets too heavy for him to carry.

Politeness costs nothing. You can pay your respects even to the bill collector.

No one knows how long it will take, but they're fighting it out on the same old lines.

Men who fall—the fellows who sit always there with an argument and a reason why not.

The great trouble with the man who gets there with both feet is that he thinks the world is his doormat.

With the trenches a stone's throw apart, only a foolish fighter would attempt to read between the lines.

The first "black book" of the war has appeared. That would seem an appropriate color for most of them.

Health officers everywhere are advising the people not to sneeze in public. Save your sneeze until you get home.

According to an astrologist, "weddings will be numerous in the spring." Sometimes these astrologists seem almost inspired.

Mississippi river barges are to be equipped with wireless apparatus, but it can never hope to compete with Mark Twain in making the river famous.

PROMINENT MEN URGING DEFENSE

Seth Low and Assistant War Secretary Talk Preparedness.

APPEALS for support of an adequate national preparedness policy, voiced by half a dozen speakers, featured a session of the National Civic Federation in Washington. President Seth Low started the discussion with the declaration that "if the United States is to prevent the antagonisms and hates of Europe and its age long traditions of empire from finding lodgment on this continent after the war it must be by the strength of our own right arm and by the willingness to die for what is certainly precious to ourselves and for what we believe to be no less precious to humanity."

Whatever might be the outcome of the war, Mr. Low said, its results could not be less than revolutionary upon the life of the world.

"If militarism triumphs," he added, "the Americas, like Europe, must bow their necks to the yoke of a militarism which will give to the soldier rather than to the citizen the domination of the future."

Mr. Low said he favored the administration's defense program, not because he thought it ideally perfect, but because it was a long step in the right direction.

"Personally," he continued, "I believe that short service under the colors on the Swiss system, modified perhaps to meet our conditions, should be required of every young man in the United States and that we should no longer depend upon an army which, as

SHORT AND SHARP.

Men's good intentions have no real chance to stop the war.

Clothes do not make the man, but they help him make a bluff.

Neighbors observe each other more than they observe the Golden Rule.

A cubist artist is proud of the title, but if you called him a blockhead he'd get mad.

The shortest month of the year is the one that is accompanied by a thirty day note.

If Europe isn't bankrupt she at least gives a splendid imitation of carrying on like one.

Discontent—fostered under the delusion that others' lives are easier and happier than our own.

All of emigrating Europe will not come to America. South Africa can hold half a billion.

You can generally tell a counterfeit coin by the ring, but you can't always detect a counterfeit love that way.

The Congressional Record continues its useful work of serving as the great mausoleum for well intentioned oratory.

Neighbors meet from planes, which is reported, sounds a great deal better than cat herds porpoised from New York, which is permanent.

The Royal Box.

Murat, king of Naples, was known as the dusky king.

Henry III. and Henry IV. of England wore lepers and were called the leper kings.

"Hellas" is the real name for Greece, and "king of the Hellenes" is the correct title of the king, not "king of Greece."

Queen Elizabeth, the widow of King Charles of Rumania, is widely known as "Carmen Syva," a writer. Her majesty, who is nearing the end of her seventy-second year, was before her marriage a princess of Wied.

Current Comment.

If the automobile has put the old fashioned carriage on the scrap pile that is no reason for putting the horse on the meat market.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Speaking of railroad property, last year was the first one in more than half a century when the new mileage measured less than 1,000 miles.—Boston Herald.

Congress has subjects before it which will call upon its members to make distinctly clear the difference between the politician and the statesman.—Washington Star.

Pen and Brush.

Mario Corelli, the novelist, is said to be in great favor with Queen Alexandra.

Miss Helen Miller of Philadelphia, at the age of sixteen, is the author of ten plays.

James Montgomery Flagg sold his first picture when he was only fourteen years old. It was a comic.

Dr. Taubenschlag of Waseda university is now laid at work in translating Shakespeare. It is the intention of Dr. Taubenschlag to complete his work during the present year.
