BATTLE CRUISERS SUPREME ON SEAS

Our Proposed Vessels to surpass British Type in Speed.

CARRY EIGHT 14-INCH GUNS.

Usefulness Has Been Vividly Illustrated in the Few Engagements They Have Been In Since the War Began.

The first authentic description of the new battle cruiser that is shortly to be built for the United States Navy has appeared.

The new battle cruiser that is shortly to be built for the United States Navy has appeared.

Our proposed vessels to surpass British type in speed.

Eight fourteen-inch guns.

Our untried and untried battle cruiser will have eight fourteen-inch guns and twenty five-inch guns.

The new fourteen-inch guns which they have developed are the superior of the fifteen-inch guns at present used in the British Navy.

The first protection of the new vessels will be the water line ten inches above the deck.

Both has thirteen and one-half inches of steel on the water line ten inches above the deck.

The Lion and Tiger are battle cruisers in the true sense of the word.

So it is not surprising that these monsters, the biggest fighting machines now afloat, are followed by their officers and men.

A squadron at the opening of the war, battle cruisers now form the nucleus of every fleet.

Fastest Fighting Fleet.

When the mist lifted for a few minutes as a correspondent stood on the central bridge of one of the British battle cruisers.

FIXING NEW DEVICES ON OUR SUBMARINES.

Workmen Busy in Brooklyn Navy Yard—G Boats For Experiments.

An unusual amount of submarine work, much of it connected with the installation and trying out of new devices from which much is hoped, is now going on in the Brooklyn navy yard, and as a result an efficient staff of workmen skilled in submarine construction and repair work has been built up.

One of the most interesting pieces of work now in progress is the installation of a gyroscopic stabilizer on the G-4.

A similar job under way on the G-3 consists of the fitting of anti-rolling devices called apsons.

Officers express the opinion that the G class of submarines will be used extensively in the future.

FLEEING SERBS BURIED MONEY

Cemeteries Favorite Hiding Places For Treasure.

SAY BULGARS FEAR DEAD.

Bulgarians Are Pouring Into Italy Now. Many Leave Their Wives at Home to Care For the Farms, Confident of Returning to Their Native Country by Spring.

There is pathetic faith in the thousands of Serbian refugees who are pouring into Italy seeking work and bread.

"We shall be home again next April," they say simply. What is more, they believe it. Most have come without a cent.

Their possessions they left at home hidden. You would be astonished to hear where they lie away from the gaze of Bulgarian or German.

They tell you, in that simple way they have of huge piles of bacon they have buried underneath "middens."

Their most precious things—money, for instance—they have hidden away in the cemeteries between graves.

"The Bulgars are afraid to touch the lead," they explain.

In general, they fear the Bulgars more than they do the Germans.

"The Germans are calculating, the Bulgars are wild beasts," they say.

Under Enemies' Feet.

All along that valley between Belgrade and Mostar are hidden the earthly possessions of these people.

Money boxes, salted meat, barrels of soap, coal and flour. They have chosen the beaten track on purpose, because the more frequented a road is the less likely are the invaders to search the earth under it.

And the Serbian refugees now in Italy have brought their wives.

They are watching things at home, they tell you confidently.

And the husband knows that the wife will set to and till the soil the moment it is free of the invader.

SAVE, BANKER ADVISES.

Individual Preparedness, America's Most Vital Problem, He Says.

State superintendents of public instruction, college professors, principals and business men joined in a discussion of the subject "Thrifty" at a meeting of the national council of education at Detroit.

Mr. Straus, a Chicago banker, who is president of the American Society for Thrift, dealt with the problem in a general sense.

"The most vital question in America today is individual preparedness," he said.

Mr. Straus declared that one person in every ten who dies in and of the age (this is buried in a potter's field).

Statistics show that in the United States there are only 108 who save.

It is only way to lay the foundation of the future of the nation is to begin today teaching thrift in our schools, he said.
