INTERESTING MENUS.

On Monday the ham should be just enough for one meal. Tuesday the pot pie is made from leftover chicken from Sunday dinner. Wednesday there can be enough of the loaf left for a lunch on Thursday. Thursday buy a small roast of pork, some may be left, or two chops could be reserved and broiled for Friday's lunch. Fish on Friday. As we seldom eat for leftover fish, enough should be purchased for one meal. If broiled fish is preferred extra may be purchased as to have a leftover which may be creamed for lunch Saturday. Saturday there will be baked beans, and of course enough for one or two breakfasts or a lunch. These are considered perfectly balanced meals and are merely samples of what may be done if the woman will plan ahead and devote time and thought to her menus.

Skirt Hangers.

Nothing can be said against the ordinary skirt hangers of wood, but as every woman likes useful things to be as ornamental as possible, there is a great deal to be said in favor of the strips of ribbon or linen that can be embroidered to form skirt hangers. Each strip has a brass ring attached to one end and a brass clip at the other. The ring is intended to be slipped over the rail of hook from which the skirt hangs. In the case of the class, the skirt is held in place. The hangers can be made in ones or they can be made as a shower gift.

Many Ribbons.

Ribbons are used liberally as trimmings for afternoon and dance frocks these days. They are made into panels, loop upon loop, and are sewed around wide bands in graduated widths. Very broad ribbons of soft brocade patterns are draped over the bodice under a veiling of tulle, and very narrow ribbons are plaited and used as an edge trimming. Gay little bowknots and rosettes of ribbon flutter from dainty frocks captivatively.

Bits About Beasts.

You think you know something about animals, do you? Well, let us put your knowledge to a few simple tests. Frogs to begin with. Can they breathe with their mouths shut? Certainly they can. As a matter of fact they always do. If they kept their mouths open they would suffocate. Next, horses. What do they lose they eyes? Answer, sweat. You see they have no eyelids so they can't shut them. But they have a thin membrane which performs the service of eyelids when they are asleep.

What is the name of a horse's eye brows? That's a difficult one. Think hard and then learn that a horse has no eye brows.

You may like to know in addition that turtles and tortoises have no teeth that parrots unlike the majority of birds, can move both mandibles of their beaks, and that fishes never masturbate. They simply haven't time between breaths. London Answers

More Ropes.

In July, 1896, General William Henry Harrison, who had been spoken of as a candidate for president, visited Philadelphia. At the time, his political friends were at the summer resort where he was to spend the summer. He was placed in a four horse carriage, but after traveling a short distance the horses became unmanageable and had to be taken out of the harness. The people began to draw the carriage, and there was a great deal of rope. They were soon procured but proved too short, and as the enthusiasm increased the cry arose, "More ropes!" and still more ropes. The Democrats saw only the funny side of the case and adopted "more ropes" as a ridiculing slogan. It did not last long and could not have hurt Harrison much, for four years later he was elected president.—Philadelphia Press

Irish Minstrels Please

Performance to be Repeated at Cathedral Hall.

The tenth annual show of the great Irish Minstrels was presented at Cathedral Hall on Monday, and Wednesday evenings before capacity houses. The minstrels were far more elaborate than the stage offerings usually attempted by amateurs, in costumes, settings and scope. The show proper was preceded by an olio of eight numbers, which gave the school children an opportunity for some excellent folk songs and dances.

The prologue opened with a chorus and an incidental solo by Donald J. York. An Irish "hit," by the girls of the school, followed, and Harold B. Turpin sang tenor songs pleasingly.

Considerable amusement was afforded by an Irish jig by John McMahon; Patrick O'Hara and John Howe. Miss Amy LaVigne showed skill as an elocutionist in a recital of "Drimin Donn Din" by Thomas Walsh, a soliloquy of the famine. Then there was another "hit" by the boys of the school. Harold Block sang a soprano solo.

The minstrel show was different from the usual thing, for one of its characteristics was an absence of burnt cork. All costumes and make-ups were of and from the Emerald Isle. The end men, Leo Hogan, Edward Feinin, Edward Sweeney and Charles Hawken, were in green coats and white knickerbockers, stockings and hats. The chorus members wore the long cloaks, ruffles and "pot" hats of Irish gentlemen. Daniel T. Roach, interlocutor, framed his deep voice in a black silk costume and a white wig.

Solos, all strictly Irish were sung by the end men and by Ray J. Golding, William Doyle, Chas. Sullivan, John Curran and Lawrence Weber. Miss May Frawley won a warm place in the hearts of her hearers with two contraalto ballads, "The Pretty Maid Milking Her Cow" and "My Wild Irish Rose." The last number of the closing chorus medley was "America, I Love You," with the singers in military formation, presumably to illustrate the idea of preparedness.

As the orchestra struck up "When First I Saw Sweet Peggy," at one point in the performance, a genuine Irish jaunting cart, drawn by end men and occupied by Miss Frawley, added to the picturesqueness of the setting. The car, one of the few in the country, was brought here about three years ago by Michael Miller, who lent it for the minstrels.

The performance will be repeated next Monday night, May 8th. Reserved seats can be had at Gibbons & Stone's, 172 Main St. East, Saturday and Monday from 2 to 6 p.m.

Ouda and the Duchesses.

Lord Rithmore told a friend how he took Ouda, in to dinner and how disappointed it was to find that the best dish he had to offer was rather than a substantial refreshment. He said at last in despair at having only been able to get "Yes" and "No" in answer to the different subjects he introduced. "I'm afraid I'm singularly unfortunate in my choice of topics. Is there anything we could talk about to interest you?"

To which the chronicler of society's shortcomings replied: "There is one thing which would interest me very much. Tell me about the duchesses. I have written about them all my life and never met one yet."

Always Be Sure of the Number

There are two ways to call a telephone number. The wrong way is to call from memory; to "Take a chance," to trust to luck that your memory doesn't play a trick on you, with the fickle figures in a telephone number.

The right way is to consult the telephone Directory and make SURE you have the right number.

The RIGHT way saves annoyance to yourself and to the persons you might have called by mistake. It helps build up a higher grade of service for yourself and others.
