THE OLD TRUNDLE BED.

Once a Real Domestic Treasure, It is Now Mainly a Memory.

There are still a few of us left who remember the trundle bed, but for which it would have been impossible to bring up the old-fashioned family of good proportions. Houses were small, and families were large in those days, and the trundle bed was a problem. It was solved by the trundle bed, a low structure that rolled beneath the "regular" bed, and which was trundled out at night and filled with children. There was no more inspiring picture than a trundle bed full of little pink children—and all trundle beds were generally full of them.

But the disorder of the room would run the modern housewife crazy. Clothes were dumped in piles upon the floor. Shoes were tossed into the corners. Stockings were mixed up generally and to be found all over the room, but some way an hour or so after the morning dressing everything supported the trundle bed was not in sight and order came out of it all while "mother" was busy with other things than "straightening up the room."

It was a feather bed of course, big and thick and soft. You sank into its very bosom. No danger of a kid falling out, no more danger than there would be of a raisin falling out of a cake. For the children fitted into the feather bed for all the world like peas in a pod—a nestlike formation holding the tiny form. Besides, if you did fall out of a trundle bed you didn't have far to fall, only an inch or two, for be it remembered the trundle bed was built low so it would roll under another bed.

But it was a glorious invention. A little boy, always "tired" for the day, and always "tired" for the night, would find it a most comfortable place to sleep. In winter, it was a warm and cozy place to sleep. In summer, it was a cool and comfortable place to sleep. It was a bed that was always ready for the rough and tumble work or play that beckoned to you. Dayton News.

Austria's Historic Crown.

The crown donned by the monarch of Austria, which was made originally by the Hungarians, and it remained under the soil for nearly a hundred years. The crown is adorned with fifty-three fine sapphires, fifty good sized rubies, one emerald and 338 pearls. The gems are set in a mass of pure gold, and the crown weighs altogether about fourteen pounds.—Exchange.

The Common People.

Coronets, miters, military display, the pomp of war, wide colonies and a huge empire are, in my view, all trifles, light as air and not worth considering, unless with them you can have a fair share of comfort, contentment and happiness among the great body of the people. Palaces, baronial castles, great halls, stately mansions, do not make a nation. The nation in every country dwells in the cottage, and unless the light of your constitution can shine there, unless the beauty of your legislation and the excellence of your statesmanship are impressed there on the feelings and condition of the people, rely upon it, you have yet to learn the duties of government.—John Bright.

The Conductor's Baton.

In early days a bandmaster—beetle time with his foot. Not till 1820 was the baton first introduced.
