Proper Education Urgently Required To Bring This About.

The Views of Two Distinguished Medical Men.

Dr. Charles H. Mayo is beyond a doubt one of the leading surgeons in the world. His home city of Rochester, Minn., is a mecca for those afflicted with bodily ills of every description. But recently he was chosen as president of the American Medical Association. His wide acquaintance with men and affairs and his eminent position entitle his views to deep consideration.

Last week, at a public health mass meeting held in the city of Detroit, Dr. Mayo warned against the lack of idealism which is more and more showing itself in American life. He declared that we were "destined to become a commercial nation, one of the meanest of types." "In a commercial nation," he added, "everything is placed on a commercial basis. The dollar rules the nation. Self-seeking is the key to such a people's actions, spelling sure degeneration."

Another distinguished medical authority, Dr. Charles W. Burr, Professor of mental diseases at the University of Pennsylvania, has laid a similar charge at our doors. In the Journal of the American Medical Association some time ago he discussed at length the question of "The Prevalence and Prevention of Insanity." In this article he showed the error and folly of many of the so-called "modern" fads for the regulation of the marital relationship and the birth of children. He exposed some of the absurd and morbid "scientific" views which have been taught to the people in regard to insanity. And he proposed certain constructive measures which would serve to check the spread of that affliction in this country. "Most important of all of these," he says, "is proper education and training of the young."

"Most dwellers in America," he adds, "are losing, indeed have lost, the old mental and moral attitude which held that man was put into the world to work, and have taken up the religion of play. This doctrine is being promulgated by the self-appointed leaders of the newest movement concerning education. Children must not be taught duty and self-control, but must be spared from all responsibility and work. School must be made entertaining. Boys are being feminized." "Their healthy imaginations must not be fed on the wholesome fairy tales of former times because fairy tales are, say these modern moralists, lies; but they are taught the worst of lies, that the greatest and most important thing in life is to live." "They must not work hard at school. They must not be whipped lest their dear little souls be hurt."

The remedy for this situation we are told is quite apparent. "The greatest thing that needs to be done is to teach children self-control, not as is now done in fashion, to protect them from stress and strain, but to teach them to withstand stress and strain." "That is what will help immeasurably to make the nation less self-seeking, less materialistic—and therefore less likely to degenerate and die."

Idealism in life must indeed be preached from the housetops in America. Self-control, self-sacrifice, the social duty to our neighbor, all are gravely needed for the preservation of our national security and life. Discipline is required for our democracy. And that discipline will come through the proper training of this nation's youth. It is here that the parochial school plays an important and patriotic role. America must learn the lesson of self-restraint and of the deadening influence of commercialism. The sooner this is learned the better will it be.

A Prelate In India Thrown From His Chariot.

Bishop Chapuis, P. F. M., of Kumbakonam, India, announced that he has had a narrow escape from death. He was making a visit to one of the villages in his diocese, and the natives to honor the occasion organized a grand reception. They turned out in a body, each one armed with cymbals, trumpets, tambourines or any article that would make a noise.

The Bishop, seated in a cart drawn by oxen, formed the central figure in the parade. Usually the oxen, well seasoned to such tumult, plod along without changing their usual gait, but the din must have been unusually maddening on this occasion, for they took fright and ran away. A big tree stood near their path and the carriage, rocking violently, was about to be dashed against it when someone stopped the animals. The Bishop descended, badly shaken up, but thankful that his brains had not been dashed out.

He adds that in his vast diocese there are only thirty priests for 100,000 Christians. Like soldiers in trenches against the enemy, but they do not know how long they can last.

Where Fire-Crackers Accompany Church Celebrations.

The celebration of religious festivals in India is accompanied with a Fourth of July style of entertainment that appeals strongly to the natives of that country, and perhaps might be also acceptable to the youth of this. In describing the ceremonial incident to the feast of St. Philip Neri, Fr. Francis, of Pallai, Ceylon, says that to mark the opening of the novena preceding the saint's day, a flag-staff is planted in the centre of the village, before the assembled populace.

The beating of tom-toms, firing of guns and exploding of crackers accompany this function. As the time proceeds and the novena draws to a close, outsiders flock to the village, setting up temporary tents made of branches, booths, and little shops that give the place a truly enchanting appearance. The uninitiated would think that a fair was in progress, but all this joyous gathering, which sometimes numbers five thousand, is really for a religious purpose. The childlike nature of the people demands such settings to what might elsewhere be considered fairly solemn events. Were they to be omitted the fact would be considered a bad augury for the village. Hence the noise and rejoicing.

The Republic Stands.

The men who died for Ireland in the rising of Easter week, have many claims on the gratitude of the Irish people, and on the gratitude of every lover of liberty in the world.

A thousand years from now their memories will be household words in Ireland as examples of sublime heroism and unselfish patriotism.

Wherever humanity is oppressed, wherever weak justice struggles against triumphant wrong, their hallowed names will nerve men to die for the sacred cause of liberty and humanity.

Ever more their names are charms against all actual and potential tyranny in the world, and the recital of their glorious lives will enable and purify the countless future generations of an Irish Republic, and will be a prayer to keep secure the tardily achieved liberties of Nations.

They had scarcely gone down in the quick lime prison graves that England dug for them, when their work commenced to bear material fruit.

In an Ireland that had almost lost its traditions of nationality and spiritualism, they built up a fabric of National sentiment, and at one glorious stroke welded into one great wedge of freedom, all that is worth while in the Irish Race.

In one week they did more for Home Rule than two generations of Constitutionalism could accomplish, and set an example even to Constitutionalists, whose significance will never be lost.

It was the least of their dreams, indeed, to see Ireland quiescent in any combination with the bloody Saxon, but their death has made that quiescence impossible.

There is little doubt that England would establish Home Rule in Ireland tomorrow, but home rule, the Act and the ideal are dead—and dead forever.

Two years ago, or one year ago, there were men in Ireland foolish enough to believe that an Act drafted by Englishmen and by the paid servants of Englishmen might be a settlement of Ireland's claims to Nationhood, but there are none today.

And England will realize this. She realizes that any measure of self-government in Ireland will and must be accepted as a step toward final and complete separation.

The Flag of the Irish Republic that was hoisted over the battered walls of Ireland's Capital will be the symbol of sacrifice and of struggle until that end is achieved.

An Irish Parliament may sit in College Green, but the phantom of an Irish Republic will ever call the young, the enthusiastic and the noble to battle for Ireland.

The dead have enunciated a principle which will live forever and their ghostly fingers will print Republicanism on every act of an Irish Legislature.

What Precipitated the Revolution.

Irish Press and News Service.

New York, June 26. Our correspondent, who was sent to Ireland in early May has just returned. He watched carefully the proceedings of the British Government's official inquiry at Dublin and sums up the results, so far of the investigation as follows: "The inquiry into the cause of the rebellion proceeds slowly and seems to have turned in the direction of finding official scapegoats in Dublin Castle who after a time will be retired to the pension list."

Summing up the evidence so far taken, there is no doubt but the Revolution was precipitated by the plan of the military authorities to imprison the Leaders of the Irish Volunteers and the Citizens Army, the latter being Trades Unionists of Dublin and other Irish cities.

Number 1. - On Easter Saturday the Government decided to arrest Leaders of the Irish Volunteer and Sinn Fein Leaders.

Number 2. - On Easter Sunday the Lord Lieutenant had decided to raid Liberty Hall with the aid of artillery and to blow up the building if persistence were offered. Liberty Hall was the headquarters of the Citizens Army composed entirely of Labor Unionists and the Irish Volunteers. The Constabulary with the aid of the Military planned to arrest all the Leaders simultaneously.

Number 3. - On Easter Sunday night, the authorities decided to arrest on the following day and to deport by special steamer to prisons in England, all of the important Irish Volunteer and Sinn Fein Leaders found in Ireland, as well as the active members of the Dublin Transport Workers.

Before these arrests could be made, the Republicans gathered in force to resist and their uprising took place at noon on Easter Monday, the Leaders having been advised in time of the decision of the Government above referred to, and they determined to get in the first blow.

Our correspondent reports that for once in the history of the Irish Rebellion the evidence shows that there were no spies or informers in the ranks of the Leaders of the Irish Volunteers, the Citizens Army or the Sinn Fein forces in Dublin or elsewhere in Ireland. The Secretary for Ireland, Mr. Burrell, and Lord Lieutenant Wimborne testified that the British Government had been unable to secure any information from the inner circles of the Irish Republican Leaders.

The number of rebels imprisoned in England and Ireland as of June 4th, is not less than 2900. The number of arrests during the past month is larger than the number of prisoners released. Our reporter has returned to Dublin to report in detail on the frightful condition of misery and poverty which he observed among the civilian population. The Country is still under Martial Law."

Dublin, June 20th. Gipher despatches from Dublin received today state that a number of riots are taking place between the Sinn Feiners, Irish Volunteers, Citizens Republican Army and British forces. A great many arrests have been made and a large number of both Sinn Feiners and members of the populace have been wounded and removed to hospitals during the past forty eight hours. A number of the County Cavan revolutionists have been arrested and deported to English detention camps to await trial. Martial Law is still being enforced with increased severity.
