The cop and I had been driven into a doorway by a shower when he said: "I am going home in about an hour, now, and I'll be one thankful man. I said home, but it was a misnomer. Why sort of a home has a patrolman got? Well, it's a place where you go to when you can't go anywhere else. Your wife and children are almost strangers to you."

World's Cradles.

Thirty-six million babies are born into the world each year, about seven in a minute, or more than one every second says a statistician. Place each baby in a cradle marked in lines, and the cradles would circle the globe. Let the babies be carried in their mother's arms just a given point, the procession being kept up night and day and at the end of a year only about one-sixth of the infantile host would have gone by, and this although they passed at the rate of twelve a minute. The babe that had to be carried when the tramp began would be able to walk when a mere fraction of its comrades had reached the reviewer's post, and when the year's supply of babies was drawing to a close there would be a rear guard not of infants, but of romping six year old boys and girls.
