The Greatest Tennis Player of Her Sex in the World.

EVEN MEN CAN'T BEAT HER.

There is One Outstanding Feature of Her Play That is Evident to Even the Untrained Eye—That is Her Powerful Forehand Drive.

In the world of lawn tennis Miss Molla Bjurstedt has accomplished that which other players have often striven for but which none has ever before attained. She occupies a unique and envied place in the sphere of her athletic activity. Having spent less than two years in this country, she is the holder of three women's national championships, a record that did not fall to the lot of even the celebrated Mrs. May Sutton Moody when she was at the height of her career and with whom she may only be compared. And more, this girl of Norway is the only foreigner to be chosen for the premier position by the ranking committee.

Miss Bjurstedt came to this country unheralded almost unknown in December, 1914, a short, sturdy girl stepped from a trans-Atlantic liner to visit New York and passed unperceived into the city. There she was engaged for her then she was just one of the crowd but in less than three months her name was known wherever tennis is played.

Today Miss Bjurstedt is known as the "greatest tennis player of her sex in the world." Indeed, few men can beat her at the game.

Unkneaded Graham Bread
Make a yeast cake of compressed yeast cake dissolved in a quarter of a cup of warm water. To this add a cup of graham flour, a quarter of a cup of sugar and a half teaspoon of salt. Cover and keep in a warm place for one hour. Add a cup of sugar and a half cup of milk. In the morning add a cup of sugar and a half cup of milk. Beat with the hand. Butter paper size of a square, four inches square, and fill with the dough. About three quarters finished then bake an hour and a quarter in a slow oven. This makes three good loaves.

Easy Rolls.
Roll one pint of fresh milk to make easy rolls. While hot put in one tablespoon of lard, one and a half teaspoons of salt and three tea-spoons of sugar. When cool add one-half cake of compressed yeast, stir in flour for a very stiff sponge, then drop or work lightly and set to rise. When risen chop in a little more flour and let rise again. Then make out as many rolls as are wanted and put the remainder in a tight pan in a cool place until needed.

Welcome Joy.
If you don't get manners ter tell Joy good mawlin' when you meets him how does you expect him ter call round by de place you live at? You better be mighty keentful fer while he be in a good humor he sho' do expect you ter greet in a halfway Atlantic City style.

Too Much of a Good Thing.
The man's catch is too good. I don't say that it has a cheerful ring to the ear, but hearing the same loud laugh all day long is like taking a dose of medicine every hour it gets to be monotonous. Birmingham Age Herald.

Indians and Time.
Certain of the reservation Indians still living to the calendar of their ancestors. The Indian method was to compute time by stars and moons. A sleep is twenty-four hours, and a moon is a month. There is also a midnoon, where the sun is at 12 o'clock meridian. This hour is indicated by pointing overhead.

When an Indian pointed quarter way up the sky he meant 3 o'clock, when he pointed quarter way down he meant 3 o'clock. Sunrise was the eastern horizon and sunset the western horizon. When there was a moon the time was indicated in the same way as by the sun. When an Indian asked the distance to a certain place or how far he had come he would say so many sleeps, or days' travel. A sleep, as describing distance was about thirty-five miles when walking deliberately or twenty-five miles if going in haste with a message.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The First Atlas.
The first globe or atlas was the work of Abraham Ortelius, a Dutch geographer, who in 1585 years ago. His monumental treatise entitled "Theatrum Orbis Terrarum" was first published at Anwerp in 1570 and was revised and reissued many times during the author's lifetime. It was a folio volume containing neatly illustrated maps, representing the different countries and continents as they were then known. Although this atlas was a magnificent achievement, for a long time it was not drawn from memory, which a better approximation to correctness. From England and Scotland, for instance, in this power to come with the best of the most exact and reliable data, and many other maps in the volume bear out a slight resemblance to those of today. New York World.

An Ant That Spins.
The spinning ant is found in Italy. In the spring the ants of the genus find in Australia. This ant weaves its nest between two leaves of a tree, preferably the mango. It begins to build up by weaving by drawing two leaves together. To do this it runs a line of its working material, similar to the spider's thread, the length of the leaf and around it. While at work it hangs to the leaf with its hanks and at the same time draws on the leaf toward it with its mandibles. Sometimes the two leaves suitable for nest building are too far apart, and they help to form a chain. Each ant clings to the waist of its neighbor by its mandibles. Thus chained, they work to build the nest of their comrade.

That Indefinite Article.
The rule dealing with the indefinite article—preceding words commencing with "a" when pronounced "ya" does not appear to be an advantage one like Minerva, with his fondness for "an" universality, many of our best writers and speakers prefer to ignore the rule and back their fancy in this line of question of euphony. As for the man in the street the matter has long ago been settled in favor of "an" in all cases where the initial "a" has the "ya" sound partly to doubt because such phrases as "an unlearned people" do not come trippingly off the tongue and have an old-fashioned, pedantic flavor. And there are sensitive ears that will prefer "a unique" to the more studied "an unique." London Chronicle.

Calendars of the Aztecs.
Calendars are probably the oldest form of literature in the world. The cards which appear by the millions in all civilized countries nowadays have their counterpart among the most ancient known races. The Aztecs, for example, were well supplied with calendars; and several of them have been preserved to this day. They were published in stone and set up in public places.
