Home Cookery

Fried Salt Pork with Cream Gravy.

Slice fat salt pork not too thick and put in cold water if it is to be fresh overnight. In hot water an hour's time will freshen sufficiently. Dip off slices in flour which has been well peppered, fry and turn till both sides are crisped a golden brown. For the gravy pour off the excess fat, usually about half, and add skimmed milk. To each cupful of milk add a table-spoonful of flour rubbed smooth with cold milk for thickening. When boiled thoroughly for seasoning. The old Yankee way was to serve this with potatoes cooked with their jackets on - Country Gentleman

Pear Honey.

Four quarts of pears, four cupfuls of granulated sugar, four cupfuls of water, half a cupful of lemon juice. After washing, pare and grate the pears into the water so they will not discolor. Put them into a preserving kettle over the fire, bring to a boil and add the sugar. Boil for from fifteen to twenty minutes and add the lemon juice. The pear honey must be clear and the thickness of strained honey.

Creamed Eggs.

Chop five or six hard-boiled eggs, not too fine. Put over the fire in a suitable dish one cupful of milk, one table-spoonful of butter, salt and pepper. When this comes to a boil stir into it a table-spoonful of flour wet with cold milk. When the dressing becomes thick and smooth stir in the chopped eggs. Serve on toast.

Beef Leg.

Two pounds of round steak, chopped fine, one egg, one cupful rolled crackers, one-half cupful of milk, one slice of salt pork, chopped, salt, pepper and sage. Mix well and bake one hour.

Vegetable Canning

Corn. Country Gentleman preferred.

Cut corn off cobs and to nine cupfuls of corn add a cupful of salt and a cupful of water. Let come to a boil, put in jars and seal. Soak corn in cold water for an hour before using.

Beans. Select tender corn or pole beans, and pack in quart jars.

On the top of each jar put in a teaspoonful of salt, then fill with cold water to tops of jars and run knife around edge to release air bubbles. Seal and place jars in boiler of cold water and let boil three hours. Remove from fire and let jars cool in water. Then wrap in paper before putting away.

Poor Health Often Due to Improper Way of Living

Only one in twenty persons, says the North Carolina state board of health, enjoys whole health, the rest live on a stage of semi-health, not sick enough to go to bed nor well enough to engage in their work with zest and enjoyment.

LANDING A DANGLER

By SADIE OLCOTT

"Bess, how long are you going to keep Ben Husted dangling about you? I think it is a girl's duty either to accept a suitor or send him away."

"Aunt Martha, it's not I who am keeping Ben dangling, it's Ben, who is keeping me dangling!"

"In that case I haven't any sympathy for you. A girl who can't bring a man to the point deserves to remain an old maid."

"What can I do?"

"What can you do? There are hundreds of things you can do. The only thing you can't do and win is to let Ben presume that any time he makes up his mind he wants you to get married. There are many reasons why a young man assumes that he doesn't wish to marry and very few that induce him to take a wife. He's not likely to look up the business of matrimony without a wife or child on his mind. He's having a good time in his youth spending all his time on his business and doubling his money before he goes to bed."

"What course would you propose to me, Aunt Martha?"

"I'm a selfish creature and you must attack him through his selfishness. First create a desire to possess you then let him understand that he is unable to possess you. Give him certain privileges that not too many boys sit on the other. Remember always that he is the fly on the spider."

"Never mind that. How shall I bring him to the point?"

"By means of a friend."

"But I know no one that I can use for that purpose."

"I do."

"Whom?"

"Myself."

The girl laughed.

"What is hidden is more profitable than what is revealed." If you used a man openly, quite likely Ben would submit enough to see that he was a poor prospect.

"How do you mean, I'm in a state of semi-health on account of my bad habits of living, the result of over-indulgence in the dinner table, little or no exercise, late sleep and get up late, no rest, fresh air and sunshine. In other words they don't order the affairs of the day toward an excellent and healthful life. Good health must be ordered at every meal and cultivated to every daily habit in order to be enjoyed and man most to life."

NATURE'S ICY GRAVEYARD.

Fossil Marvels Show the Dreary Wastes of Arctic Siberia.

Little does the traveler think as he drives over the dreary wastes of snow and sees no living thing save the arctic fox, the raven and the snowy owl that the ground below him is packed full of the remains of enormous animals that have perished in some mysterious manner. Such nevertheless is the extraordinary fact states "Siberia and the Polar Sea."

The whole of northern Siberia, from the Ural mountains to Bering strait is one vast graveyard. The bones, teeth and skulls are those of elephants, rhinoceroses, buffaloes and muskoxen. They occur everywhere. They are found on the banks of the rivers, in the plains on rising ground and in frozen cliffs. On the shores of the Arctic ocean there are sloping banks of ice. These are split and furrowed in all directions with deep chasms, and as the traveler looks down into their dark depths from above he sees that the lower portions of these by chasms are filled with fossils.

In other places on the northern coast of Siberia, fronting the Arctic ocean the low cliffs but rise above the ocean and are formed of earth and clay are full of the bones of elephants and rhinoceroses. In the latter summer, which hardly lasts for six weeks, portions of these earth cliffs hang and fall on the beach below. Then it is that the traveler who walks along the shores will witness an astounding spectacle. Not only does he observe the bones stranded on the beach, but he also sees the tusks and bones of elephants (the mammoth) lying on the shore.

If he leaves the Arctic ocean behind and travels inland the same sights constantly meet his astonished gaze. He comes, it may be to a plain where for perhaps half a mile the whole ground seems to be formed of masses of tusks, teeth and bones of elephants and rhinoceroses wedded to gether in one confused mass in the frozen soil. These mighty bones must have been destroyed in terrible ways how this puzzled no one knows. Still more amazing is the fact that the islands in the Arctic north of Siberia are equally full of the tusks and bones and on the shores of these islands it has been seen sticking up in the frozen soil.

Stranger still, actually the very bodies of these great elephants, with flesh and hair perfect are seen standing upright in the frozen cliffs. When the cliffs hang the bodies of these great elephants fall to the ground and are so perfect after being entombed for thousands of years that the workers at the mines.

There are many who maintain that a great future is before Siberia, owing to its vast mineral wealth and its corn producing power. This applies to the southern districts, but has nothing to do with the regions of awful desolation to which we have referred.

The Minstrel

By F. A. MITCHEL

There was a kingdom belonging to the eastern Roman empire the sovereignty of which was at a certain period a young girl named Eudoxia. She was twenty years old and very beautiful. For many generations the royal family had intermarried among each other. This had resulted in keeping up certain hereditary diseases among them, and they had been very much thinned by death.

When the queen was urged by her nobles to marry that there might be an heir to the throne the heralds were instructed to hunt up some person of royal blood whom she might wed. It was found that there was no man living whom her majesty might marry who was not tainted with some hereditary disease. But a man, Harmodius was discovered who had descended from another branch of the royal family, who was young and wealthy. It was represented to the queen that if she did not marry this person she could not marry at all. Furthermore, if she did not have an heir Harmodius would be the only person who would have any claim whatever to the throne.

Now it happened that not long before this marriage question came up Eudoxia had been sitting in the royal gardens one sunny day when, from beyond the wall of the grounds of music a man was singing, accompanied by a lute. The music was sweet and when the song was over, as at an invitation the musician stepped forward to her. He bowed and kissed her hand and then, proved to be a minstrel singing as his voice.

The queen kept him singing for awhile, then dismissed him with a gift which he enjoyed.

Eudoxia, however, was not so easily pleased with her heart, she felt that the man the more she listened to, the more she loved him. She had intended to command him to sing again to her, but she did not wish to let her majesty know that she had fallen in love with a minstrel.

She could not forget the service Harmodius had done her. She could not forget of her lute and his music, and she could not drive him out of her mind. She was so overcome by his singing that she decided to let him stay in the palace and sing to her whenever she pleased. She was so overcome by his singing that she decided to let him stay in the palace and sing to her whenever she pleased.

When it was reported to Eudoxia that Harmodius had become a minstrel she became madly in love with the musician. She put her hands off as long as possible in the matter of marrying Harmodius, and she would not do so no longer desired music to bring her his portrait. He came to her then, and they set out to live in the royal apartments. They remained much discontented. Harmodius declined to furnish his portrait.

Eudoxia, however, did not get impatient at this for she was very busy being more and more infatuated with the handsome singer who by royal command was frequently to the palace in secret to sing for her royal mistress. However, the cabinet insisted that the queen should marry, and since Harmodius was so devoted to her she could marry her without objection. She resisted these demands until they threatened her if she did not yield they would set up an evolution and put Harmodius on the throne.

One day when the minstrel came to sing for the queen she told him that it was the last time she could listen to him. She confessed her love for him but added that she was obliged to marry or lose her sovereignty. The minstrel begged that he might sing one more song for her. He was permitted to sing and sing, expressing his love so profoundly that the queen broke down, and told him that she would give her kingdom for him. He told her that he loved her but would not permit her to accept the sacrifice, and they parted.

The queen now informed her ministers that she would wed Harmodius, or any one they chose. Preparations were made for the wedding while the queen waited in secret. She was solicited to receive Harmodius before the ceremony was held. When the marriage was over she would not look at him. After she had pronounced a mutual couple her husband said, "My queen."

Eudoxia started. The voice was that of the minstrel. She looked up and there before her was the man who had sung her heart and for whom she had offered to give up her kingdom.

Harmodius had learned before any one else that he was the only man the queen could marry and being possessed of a winning voice had sung to her from beyond the wall of the royal garden and found her heart an easy prey.

The minstrel, as King Harmodius and Queen Eudoxia till the Turks overran that part of Europe in which their kingdom lay.

The story of King Harmodius and Queen Eudoxia was long told as an illustration of the power of music, especially over a woman's heart.

HOMEMADE SOAP

This soap is made of pork rinds and scraps of fat meat. First remove all the meat then soak the scraps in cold water to remove all color, whether sugar cured or smoked. Use ten pounds of the scraps to two boxes lye. Put one and one-half or two gallons water in the kettle, let it boil till dissolved, put in the grease and boil slowly for an hour or two or until all grease is eaten, stirring often. When no ribs or chunks of meat come up on stick put water in kettle, stirring all the time till it becomes like honey, keeping up fire a little while. When ready to leave, before taking the stick out, put in a half pound of borax, stirring till well mixed. Let cool till morning. Cut out and dry.

Baseball and the Marines

American baseball is the best and grandest of sports in the world and is capable of giving wonderful pleasure to the player and the spectator.

The average American youth is fond of playing a game with a bat and a ball. It is because of that so, as a nation, are especially fitted to wage the modern war of the trenches. Baseball is pronounced at all our schools and the skill developed by marines - even initiated recruits - in the bomb and grenade throwing practice is really remarkable, said a marine corps officer.

Ancient Preservation of the Dead

Herodotus gives a good description of the manner in which the early Ethiopians preserved their dead.

Having thoroughly dried the corpse, they plastered it over with a paste made of gypsum and then painted the face and exposed parts so as to make them look as natural as possible. Dead bodies served in this manner remained intact for hundreds of years - London Globe
