A SHARK STORY

By SADIE OLCOTT

A number of women over afternoon tea cups were talking about marriage and how trifling may be the cause of two persons living absolutely dependent upon each other...

"I have been married only a few weeks," said the little lady. "There was an episode connected with my meeting my husband, but I hesitate to tell it after the receipt of the thrilling experiences of the others."

Great heavens! exclaimed several ladies at once. In that case, continued the little lady, I was taught to swim.

"I was four years old I would dive off a dock in twenty feet of water and when I was ten I never swam inside the waves."

"I was a swimmer," she continued, "but I was not a swimmer in the water until I was twelve."

"I was a swimmer," she continued, "but I was not a swimmer in the water until I was twelve."

Mother's Doll Story

Peggy Goes Nutting

Once upon a time there was a little girl that wanted to go out in the woods nutting.

She called through the back fence to the neighbor that lived next door.

Now the little girl's name was Peggy and the rubber doll was a little boy by the name of Bob.

They had a very high fence between the meadow and the woods.

They had to cross a brook. But this was no matter to Bob, as he was made of rubber.

Let the players seat themselves on the floor around a square, over which they are to stretch a sheet.

A UNIQUE ROBBERY

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

From time to time some young man appears in the criminal world who from the pranks he plays, his daring and the odd-like way he slips through the fingers of the police excites the admiration of such as are prone to read dime novels.

In Vampa's day most of the travel was done in the diligence or the post chaise. One day a diligence left Bologna for Florence.

Vampa had appeared on the route between Bologna and Florence, turning up unexpectedly at one point then at another, leaving tribute.

On arriving at a certain point where horses were changed a young woman, wearing some flowers in her corsage, asked to be taken aboard.
