A Thanksgiving Prayer

LORD, I have complained and been a heedless toiler in the ranks and over eager to win. But now I offer up my thanks for mercies that have been bestowed upon me, even though I whined. And now I pause beside the road to recognize that thou art kind.

A Day of Days

THIS is the day of all our days. When we in crowded cities sigh for one sweet breath of old time ways. That once we passed so heedless by. How romance clothes the stubbled mead! What glory crowns the bare brown hill! How sounds afar the ancient creed. "Oh, if we could be children still!"

Because I journeyed day by day

And knew not where and couldn't see I wailed that I had lost my way. And cried, "Thou hast deserted me!" When grief was knocking at my heart And tears were streaming from my eyes I only knew I felt the smart. But now I know that thou art wise.

The Gobbler's Sorrow

A gobble came to me in a terrible hour. A gobble came to me in a terrible hour. A gobble came to me in a terrible hour. A gobble came to me in a terrible hour.

CAUSE FOR THANKFULNESS.

Of course you who talk of good old times do not believe this. You point to the tables of prosperous farmers which are covered with good things. Well the tables did groan on high feasts and high days for the rest of the year was often a day of fasting. This year's good was our first reason for thankfulness that we are well fed on common days as well as on holidays and that we do not know actual want. As for clothes when did you ever see an ever so rich in the army? I mean the average woman. Your grandmother's best black silk needed many turnings before it could be discarded and every day she wore unbecoming prints while you in your white blouses or your one piece frock may be as charming in morning dress as when you are more formally attired. And you! Do you ever know when it is to be cold? And you grandmother ever know what it was to be really warm? The fireplace in the living room seemed to make even colder the bedrooms which were beyond the radius of heat. And there was, too, to break in the pitcher on a morning and the necessity for a warming pan between the shivery sheets at night. Temple Bailey in Philadelphia Press.

Woman Who Made Thanksgiving

It was a woman, Mrs. Sarah J. Hale, who made Thanksgiving a national holiday. She was a woman who made Thanksgiving a national holiday. She was a woman who made Thanksgiving a national holiday. She was a woman who made Thanksgiving a national holiday.

CUTTING UP THE PUMPKIN

FALL TO!

ALREADY all over the land a fragrant cloud of incense peculiar to the great national feast day is rising. Already in the high temple of Thanksgiving the homes of the American people, the priestesses are curiously and lovingly engaged on the multifarious mysteries that figure in the rites of this great day. Their activities will broaden and deepen up until the very hour of the great ceremony, and until then mere men are kept jealously behind the pale and nervously guess what is going on in the kitchen. A man's part may be played, however. The fruits of the field and the chase are to be provided, either with sweat of the brow or bought with a price, and this much a man may do and most American men gladly do. But, having provided these, man's responsibilities end. He has then but to possess his soul with patience, a carefully nurse a tremendous appetite for the appointed time, and then, careless and with a heart for any fate, thoughtful only of the glorious reality of brown, juicy, glistening turkey and golden pumpkin pie. EAT ON. But, after all, the most important thing is not the dinner, but the Thanksgiving day atmosphere, the golden colors and details of home, the exquisite delight of merely being with those whom we love more than all the world beside, the inter change of happy, loving talk, the quick mutual understanding. These must all be supplied by the reader from the treasure house of personal experience and sacred memory.
