Monday evening Rt. Rev. Bishop Thomas F. Hickey came from Rochester with a retinue of priests and about 8 o'clock the office for the dead was intoned by the bishop and 14 priests. The sanctuary was lighted by innumerable candles.

The opening for the public has been set for Saturday, at noon, when the same program as that is planned for Friday night will be given. Admission Friday night will be by invitation only, the private showing having been arranged as a sort of celebration for those back of the enterprise and their friends.

It is just and proper that all people should consider the source from whence our happiness has come and set apart a day on which to return thanks unto God for the goodness with which our country has been blessed.

After the Dinner. The after dinner amusements can be the "Turkey and Potatoes" to the day. There might be potato races, each potato being carried on a spoon, guessing the number and weight of potatoes contained in a heavy canvas bag or some who could grab up the greatest number of potatoes from a barrel in a given time on the end of a string and carry them to a basket at the other end of the room.

THE people of the United States celebrate Thanksgiving day with more and more fervor every year. Indeed, one might say they have more and more reason. The fathers of New England, hemmed in between a wilderness and the sea, watched their doubtful crops in anxious memories of other years of famine. When they found that once more there was fish enough and pork enough and corn and beans and pumpkins and squashes and turnips enough to carry them through the winter they met to thank God, knowing full well how many hazards they had passed through, for those days as compared with today were days of pinching poverty. The New England historian Dr. Palfrey says with a certain dryness which shows probably some personal preference: "Baked beans point to the time when it was desirable to make the most of the commonest vegetable by throwing it with the best of the commonest animal."

All this is forgotten, however, for the world today is not a part of famine as it was long ago. And why? The American of today gives thanks that famine is well nigh impossible.

First of all he remembers that he is no longer dependent on the crops of a few hundred square miles of the fishing voyage of a single summer. Thanks to the providence of God as it has worked in history and to the work of brave men who believed they were children of God, the petty colonies which were thus described are now one nation, of that nation the poorest and the poorest has ever right and privilege before the law which belongs to the strongest, the richest and the wisest, though he were born in the purple of luxury. To the widow's son of the poorest citizen of that nation then, there was come suddenly bread to answer to his daily prayer, though it came from the mill of a foreigner, what is to be the same a little of the fish of the Spaniard, without let or hindrance from any power of earth. If there is food in plenty for our region, as by the fact of an available home, it will certainly be a consumption in another region. And this the American boy and girl owe to the good Providence and to the brave men who made this country one and have kept it one.

It is too much the blindness of our time to speak as if such a simple business as daily food came to us as a matter of course. There is, indeed, a careless habit in which Americans often speak, as if because they are Americans, they have everything without so much as asking for it. Fourth of July orators and street corner braggarts alike talk of the natural products of this country almost in the tone of the emigrants who expect to pick up a doubloon upon the sidewalk. One is tempted to ask such braggarts why the country did not produce such wealth 100 years ago or 200 years ago. Why was Dakota then a desert? Why were the hills of Alabama only a hid-tid place for a few thousand Creek Indians? Why did they not forge the iron under their feet? Why did not the Inquots in western New York pick from their trees the peaches and the pears such as have been growing there this autumn?

The answer is this: All the wealth of America comes to her from the work of her men and women. The victory which yields it is their victory. It is the victory of spirit conquering matter. It comes in the daily miracle of daily life where children of God, led by God, taught by God, alive in his life and fellow workers with him, carry out his designs and subdue the earth. It is neither sensible nor grateful to speak of booming granaries, of increasing trade of new mines, of oil, of iron or of gas as if these things were wealth in themselves. They are only wealth when man strikes the rock and its waters flow. And this man must be not the savage man who cares only for his own personal appetite. It must be man, the child of God, seeking a future better than today, determined to bring in a nobler age than that which he lives in.

Know the Brand. "Is that a London Mr. Croesus?" asked the visitor, pausing before the painting. "No," replied the host, "re-ckon it is a Durham. See how broad it is between the horns and see the color and curl on its forehead. That's a genuine Durham sure. Exchange."

Balky Machine. "Do you want me to watch your automobile?" asked the boy. "Yes," replied Mr. Cuggins. "And if it tries to start up and run away don't stop it. Holler for me, and I'll take a chance on overtaking it and getting the first ride I've had for three or four hours."—Washington Star.

Kindness of Nature. "Ain't nature wonderful?" "Why?" "She gives us all faces, but we can pick our own teeth."—Harvard Lampoon.
