

Long Talks on Party-Lines Shut out Incoming Messages

A PARTY-LINE can send or receive but one telephone call at a time.

While one subscriber is using the telephone others on the same line must wait for incoming as well as outgoing calls.

You know how inconvenient it is to wait while your neighbor uses the telephone for a long conversation. But have you considered the incoming calls shut out by these long talks?

It is important that your party-line be kept open as much as possible for incoming messages. You can assist in obtaining this result by holding your telephone calls down to five minutes or less.
