

THE LATEST BIRD. FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Ruth Law Flies 590 Miles Without Stopping Once.

HER FIRST DISTANCE EFFORT.

Traveled Without Hitch at 103 Miles an Hour From Chicago to New York and Had to Land For Gasoline Only Breaks One World Record.

Miss Law, when she is not flying, is Mrs. William Oliver, 215 125 pounds and is five feet five inches high. "I don't think I grew or I lost any weight on my trip. These were the figures when I left Chicago," she said after her amazing flight. The twenty-eight-year-old woman who flew 590 miles, from Chicago to Hartford, N. Y., just because she made up her mind she would fly who asked for a puff when she was unstrapped from the seat of her biplane at the island, where her husband is a pilot, less and as being untroubled by the gray Shetland cap which topped her fluffy wind-blown hair. She was found behind a screen in an out-of-the-way corner of a New York hotel.

tel dodging congratulations, telephone calls, invitations to give the money or go into voluntary work. She has just returned from a flight of 590 miles, which she had bought a very handsome white satin waist.

"That," she explained of her special ring, "was my last one on the trip from Chicago to the state of New York. It came out of a very nice box and gave me the day of my flight. After it was broken, I made up my mind to carry it in my pocket just for luck. They say I've broken three records, but this trip makes me feel I've smashed the one's reputation for bringing bad fortune."

A sister of Roland Fox, famed as the "human fly" and parasite jumper, Miss Law, whose full name is Ruth Bannett Law, was born on March 21, 1887, in Lynn, Mass. She received her pilot's certificate on Nov. 20, 1912, four years ago, taking her first flight with a Wright biplane. Since that time she has made thousands of exhibition and passenger carrying flights.

She broke the altitude record for women on May 27 of this year. In company with several other aviators, she appeared at the military tournament at Sheepshead Bay. They all competed in the altitude contest, and Miss Law set the high mark for women by flying 11,200 feet.

Smart as she is, she is not a flighty girl. She is a very calm and collected person. She has a half-brother, a very successful and deep thinker, who is a very successful and deep thinker. She has a very successful and deep thinker.

The new team in the 100 miles long and a half inch wide, with the letter of the surman on the back, in the middle and the other two in the three quarters of the inch, 2 inches in the top and bottom in outside effect, is very new. This is really printed on the upper soft hand cover of a kerchief.

Three hours in the Old English lettering are always in good style and less subject to the caprice of fashion.

Christmas Shopping List.
Furs, opera glasses, party bag feathers, bon, evening slippers, stationery, subscriptions to magazines, odd pieces of furniture, like chairs, table, book shelf for her room, fancy or sewing outfits, outfitting for her favorite sports or hobby, as drawing or music, may relieve the young man's suspense week before Christmas.

Buy handkerchiefs this year. Buy them because several who know say that war has made the linen supply meager.

GIANT BOYS CHRISTMAS.

There was a time when there was a little boy who lived near the edge of a forest. One day in the woods he had met a little boy from a faraway land. The little boy had been out in the woods looking for the Christmas trees.

"Dear girl," the giant boy said, "would you tell me what you mean by Christmas?"

"The little boy from Maryland told me all about Christmas and Santa Claus, and the little giant boy thought Christmas was a fine idea."

"But we don't have it here," he said. "I wish we could get Santa to come to our little town in Maryland."

"Oh, that's easy," replied the giant boy. "I'll get a letter to Santa. He'll come to see you."

"Then the little boy took the road through the woods that the giant boy had led him to, and he was very soon around the tree again."

"That evening the little giant boy told his father and mother about Santa Claus, and they were very glad to hear that their children had Christmas."

"Santa was pleased when he got the letter, but when the other year the giant boy and his little boy were together, he never visited them and he felt that the boys which he made to children of ordinary size would never do for giant children."

However, Santa made up his mind he would do the best he could.

On Christmas night he stopped his sleigh on the roof of the giant boy's house. When he saw the big chimney, Santa Claus was almost tempted to jump down, but when he saw the giant boy's house, he decided to wait.

He remained to scramble down, but when he saw the giant boy's house, he decided to wait.

The little giant boy was very happy when he found the stockings full of gifts. He had never visited them and he felt that the boys which he made to children of ordinary size would never do for giant children.

ABOUT COATS.

Style Tips About the Very Latest Smart Touches.

If the tailor whom you consult has a pattern of one of those new coats that are built up above the waist line by a series of skilfully arranged gussets especially placed in the front, then you can safely rely upon it for the original touch which we all hunt as for a needle in a haystack.

Contrary to the first assertions of the early autumn, there are high, straight fur collars still in fashion. They are not in the old-fashioned style, but as long as they are worn at a certain women will cling to them for the sake of warmth and because they dispense with the fretting worry of how to hide the neck when a low blouse is worn for no matter what fashion has decreed our women have not yet taken up with the high topped collar to any extent.

The colors are still the winter Black is not so popular with an approving eye, and it is not attractive in the fabrics which are chosen for suits, ranging as they do over a severely limited area. Broadcloth of the extremely strong weave is insisted upon by conservative styling authorities to make it fashionable, but there is no appeal from the popularity of velvets.

This fabric has been immensely improved since it came to us as a way that ran threadbare under the least rough usage. Today it stands knocking about with the gab dices and serge, and its glowing has also been so perfect that it is one of the richest shades of the winter in fashion.

Blue for some in the light reason that we are all tired and a bit of its place except with a few decidedly smart designers, and the preference is given to deep tones of red that nearly every woman can find in her heart to wear.

Reddish-brown is worn in the shade but not as much as the exclusive as well as by those who only want a warm shawl on a cold day. Both green and several tones of brown, such as olive, hazel, and tan, are taken up by designers. These schemes are being experimented with green than with the other colors, and, of course, the woman who can carry off the color is so proud of the fact that she flaunts her superiority in the face of the public whenever she can.

CHEAPER BREAD.

How Rye Flour Cuts the Cost of Even the Best One Loaf.

With the price of wheat flour soaring almost daily, the housewife is naturally concerned with any suggestion for lowering the cost of the staple of life.

To answer occasional inquiries for methods of making rye flour, Miss Pearl Macdonald, in charge of home economy's extension at the Pennsylvania State college, has prepared this recipe:

Two cups of tepid, soft water and half measure.

Two tablespoons of salt and a dash of sugar.

A quart of rye whole wheat flour, divided in a quart, rye or rye flour.

Three to four cups of rye flour. Enough water to form a dough.

Small lard and fat salt. Salt. When lard is used, add a dash of salt and enough flour to make a better dough. When lard is not used, add a dash of salt and enough flour to make a better dough.

A combination of rye and wheat flour gives a lighter and more desirable loaf than one made with rye flour alone.

Invasions of Russia

The first great invasion of Russia was that of the Huns, a race of fierce and warlike Asiatics who swept over eastern Europe in the early century.

In the thirteenth century the golden horde of Tartars captured Russia, and from 1238 to 1482 the country was under the yoke of the Mongols. In 1485 Timur-Leng, the great Turk, but retired in 1482 the Swiss, and gained the ascendancy and Ivan III, the Great, founded the present monarchy and introduced firearms and cannon into Russia.

In 1470 there was another great invasion of Tartars, but they were driven out. In 1613 the present royal family, the Romanoffs, gained the throne. In 1700 the Swedes invaded Russia, but after several victories they were routed.

The last great invasion of Russia was that of Napoleon. His disastrous retreat from Russia, in which most of his army was destroyed, marked the beginning of the end of his power. St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

An Invisible Clock

A pocket watch which can be heard, but not seen, is one of the most curious pieces of machinery in the tower of St. Mary's church, New York. It has been in the tower since 1789. It frames the quarters and the hours, but admits itself to be heard. It has no dial, no hands, no outward and visible sign of any kind to show that it is a clock. This peculiarity, it is explained, is the result of two causes, one aesthetic, the other practical. When the tower was built in 1870 a clock was suggested as an afterthought, but the architect protested that it would mean the addition of seven feet to the tower and the ruin of its cherished proportions. A second point was that the church, having but slender funds, could not afford a clock with a dial. A compromise was arrived at by installing the works of a chiming clock in the belfry without dial or hands—Pearson's.

Economy.
