

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

THE ROAD TO SUCCESS.

A Sleepy Time Story About New Year's Resolutions.

MANY ARE SOON FORGOTTEN

Strange Dream About Old Father Time and His Young Successor—Rather Sad Tale of Promises Made and Broken—Time for Skates.

Little Ned and Polly And were talking about New Year's resolutions, when Uncle Ben appeared. Tonight, he said I am going to tell you about

BROKEN RESOLVES.

It isn't any use to make the resolutions unless you intend to keep it. I had a dream the other evening that I stood in the palace of the King of Time. In one hand he held his sword, in the other the broad scimitar with which he measures the length of the year.

I noticed that almost the last grain of sand had run out of one end of the glass into the other, and so I was not surprised when he cried in a loud voice:

"It is finished," and a sorrowful old man stepped up and took the old King away from Father Time.

"That's the old year, one of the expert people whispered to me."

"Poor old fellow, he's leaving us. We shall never see him any more."

Some of those in the hall murmured: "He did some good things—and was a jolly, good friend—but here comes the New Year. See how much harm some clever boy is."

A charming young man was stepping up to the throne of Father Time, holding him amidst his robes.

"I have here some young friends that I would like to introduce to you and justify the youth of the New Year."

"These are the new-year rewards of my new success in the New Year's race." They are to be the little rewards given to us all.

"Ah, indeed," Father Time said dryly. "I hope they are as healthful as those of last year. Please think you are using God's grace."

And every one tried to be as good as the little rewards that Father Time suddenly gave.

"Why," exclaimed the New Year, "that's Billie, my successor, who is carrying his hat at the head of the list in the U.S.A."

"He's forgotten the little results mounted. 'I'm a broken reed.' At the poor little thing faded away before ever.

"Every time a resolve is broken there is less chance of a strong, healthy, nerve-taking life next year. The children knew this (perhaps they would be more careful). Father Time said kindly:

"I mentioned it to them, you know. When old Boleslaw got his skates he was too and snow and, of course, skating. The girl is a skater, you can see. But she is not expert enough to go on single runners, so she wears double

Roar Meat.
The tigers paced their cages, getting hungry for their food. And the manners of the lions were distinctly rough and sick.

"What do they feed them, auntie?" asked a trembling girl in the cage.

"New meat, of course," the auntie, pointing to a keeper just in sight.

As he came the growl louder, and the rafters rang the more. The little wide-eyed boy looked wise. "Oh, that's what it keeps them roar!"

OUR SECRETARIES OF WAR.

Only a Few of Them Had Any Practical Military Experience.

The first secretary of war of the United States was Henry Knox, who was born in Boston Aug. 23, 1750, a Scotch Irish pamphleteer. Knox was the chief commander of the artillery throughout the Revolution and was secretary of war both before and after Washington assumed the presidency being one of the few soldiers appointed to that position.

His successor, Timothy Pickering, had also seen active service, and James M. Hart, the third to hold the post, had been a surgeon in the Revolution. Samuel Dexter, the next in line was a lawyer, but Henry Dearborn, Jefferson's secretary of war, had had much military experience. William Eustis, appointed by Madison, was a physician and gave way to a military man, John Armstrong. James Monroe, and William H. Crawford were lawmen.

The picture is intended to express a wish for legal election the best qualification for the proprietor. In case of a head of the war department,

U. S. Grant, who held the war portfolios for a brief period in 1867, and William T. Sherman, whose tenure of office was equally short, were the only ones who had had military experience.

The stork in Japan is supposed to live 1,000 years, the turtle 10,000 years.

Hence they both express a wish for long life. The pine tree is always green, therefore it is a symbol of eternal good fortune. The sun is the symbol of increasing good fortune as time passes good fortune increases as the sun goes on. The palm tree blossoms in winter and is extremely fragrant. It has a very prominent place in Japanese art.

There are seven gods of

New Year greeting cards. These seven gods correspond to Buddhist deities, and recently Buddhist temples have two purposes. They convey good wishes to the patron and they advertise the merchant.
