NATIONAL BAN ON BEER UNJUST, DECLARES CARDINAL GIBBONS
 Prepared to Cooperate With Government in Its Restrictive War Measures, Prelate Thinks Total Prohibition Impossible.

"I do not believe in the national prohibition of light wines and beer, and am of the opinion that such a law could not be enforced. My views on that in the past have not deviated in a single instance at the present time."

The cardinal made it plain, however, that his opposition was directed at prohibition merely as a national measure affecting everyone. He is preparing to co-operate with the government in every way in the enforcement of such restrictive measures as are now in force and such others as may be taken to protect the men of the army from the evils of alcohol.

"I am opposed to any statewide or national prohibition measure," the cardinal continued. "A law of this kind interferes with the personal liberty and rights of the people, and creates hypocrisy on the part of the public."

"If the people of any particular country district find conditions such that to have local option would mean the betterment of the community, then they should close the saloons in that district. But when it comes to having prohibition in large cities, it is a bad thing."

"Prohibition in any of the large cities is impossible of enforcement, however great the attempt made to carry out the law and notwithstanding reports that the law has been carried out successfully in certain localities."

Believes in Temperance.
 "The history of the world down to the present time demonstrates the fact that the people have always indulged in intoxicating liquors, irrespective of the restraining powers that are attempted to be saddled upon them."

The cardinal pointed out that he firmly believes in temperance, but that it is a matter that rests with the individual. He said that it was true in a large number of cases that the use of wines and liquors is often abused, and therefore attributable to lamentable regrets, but he pointed out the best of commodities are liable to abuse.

His eminence spoke of the abuse of some persons with their tongues, which in itself was a most harmless but useful thing. He said that everybody knew of the social and domestic joy and utility derived from conversation, yet the bad use of the tongue leads to lying, quarreling, slander, often bloodshed, and many times murder.

Calls Plan Illogical.
 He pointed out that, because some persons made it a practice to abuse the use of the tongue, it would not be sane or just to muzzle everyone.

The cardinal is a firm believer, however, in the application of proper safeguards and restraints in carrying out the laws regulating intoxicants. He said what he would recommend for every city and community was a high license and laws that would result in their being obeyed and carried out to the letter.

He also expressed himself in favor of severe punishment for any violations in the conduct of a saloon, and said licenses should be taken away from all persons who insist on violating the liquor law.

Cardinal Gibbons said he could not see any need for national prohibition at this or any time, and he felt that to saddle the proposition on the people without their consent was unjust and illogical.—Adv.

He is one of the leading Republicans of the city, being high in the councils of his party and controlling the Republican forces in his home ward, the Nineteenth.

TUESDAY MUSICALS
 Interest in the Tuesday Musicales concert series for the coming season shows that public appreciation of the unusual character of the attractions is widely appreciated. This organization each year strives to offer artists who have recently come into the foreground. Jacques Thibaud, of course, has long been recognized as the greatest of French violinists, but he has never been heard here and he comes as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Leopold Stokowski conducting. This concert is to be the second in the evening series at Convention Hall, on November 23.
