

The NOMAD

By JANE OSBORN

The Cordovas had always been nomads. Alice always told her friends...

"I Really Do Like You."

morning in the old Cordova homestead and Alice...

Alexander Burton had proposed every six months since that time...

Alice stopped trying to argue Alice out of her notion early in his courtship...

"But you might as well marry me as to stay here all your life," he suggested...

Alice's wardrobe from year to year always showed a complete traveling outfit...

WHERE TAXES ARE UNKNOWN NOW KNOWS WHAT A LEA IS

Some Few Places on Earth's Surface That Would Seem Ideal Spots in Which to Locate.

In these days of expensive living what a boon to live in a city without taxes!

There is Orson in Sweden. This municipality has its ordinary city expenses, but it imposes no taxes.

All this is due to the wisdom of a former generation, who planted trees on all the available ground...

Then there is Mourmelon, in the Midi, France. Here not only are there no taxes, but the timbers on the communal lands are sufficient to grant each person a small annuity.

Nearer home we have the island of Inishmurray, off the west coast of Ireland. Here there are no taxes, simply because the fourteen families who live on the island resolutely refuse to pay.

There would not be an objection, would there? asked Burton, quite calmly.

"Yes, indeed," commented Alice. She tried to keep Burton from leaving early that evening.

SPOT ON NAPOLEON'S RECORD

Ultimate Failure Dimmed the Glory of Great Soldier's Early Wonderful Successes in the Field.

The military genius of Bonaparte is still a fruitful theme for discussion.

In the early part of his career he achieved such successes as made his name a terror to Europe, and gained for him a prestige which a series of continuous and overwhelming defeats in the latter part of his history was unable to destroy.

One qualification of a great general was conspicuous in his character, the capacity of recognizing and rewarding merit in whatever position it might be found.

One need not look far behind to find "and as a March hare" also attributed to the prolific Spaniard, but really it was an inspiration of the English poet, John Skelton, who lived in the time of Edward IV.

TO RECLAIM DISMAL SWAMP

Engineers Have Long Had Their Eyes on Picturesque Wilderness Which Can Be Made Valuable.

Dismal Swamp, which lies just south of Norfolk, Va., partly in that state and partly in North Carolina, is one of the most picturesque wildernesses in the eastern United States.

The thick jungles and oozing bogs at once offer perfect hiding places for the wild things and obstacles to the hunter which are often impassable.

It is nevertheless regularly visited by some hardy hunters, and is the delight of naturalists and scientists of all kinds, who here find what they most love—unspoiled, primitive nature.

The Dismal Swamp has great possibilities of future usefulness. In the first place, it contains some of the deepest and richest deposits of peat in the United States.

Engineers say that the swamp can be drained, and that it will then become one of the richest bits of farmland in America.

With the thought of yesterday's epigrammatist in mind, it should be set to record that no one has handed down to this age more homely and immortal sayings than Cervantes.

"Sure as a gun." Within a stone's throw. "Little said is soonest mended." "There is no place lost between us."

"Honesty is the best policy." "All is not gold that glitters." "A word to the wise is sufficient."

"The pot calls the kettle black." "Counting your chickens before they are hatched." "My thoughts ran a wool gathering."

In "Little Old New York." If a certain actor had accompanied a party of round-the-towners the other night he would have been either thrilled or embarrassed.

American Invented Electric Fan. Michael Faraday devised the electro-magnetic rotation apparatus in the year 1822.

These devices were very crude and simple, however, and developed in antislavery power. Undoubtedly the first electric motor employing magnets wound with many turns of wire, and also comprising a motor which utilized both permanent steel magnets and electro-magnets, was that perfected by Prof. Joseph Henry of Princeton university, in the year 1831.

Henry's motor, according to Electrical Experimenters, was the forerunner of the present day electric motor.

Philippines Grow Best Hemp. Hemp may grow all over the world but the famous Philippine fields are the ones we know best as yet.

They have a real monopoly on the crop, and their soil seems to be especially adapted for it.

The very best quality of hemp grown in the Philippines comes from the fields about Mount Mayon in Luzon.

WORK ALONG WRONG LINES

Writer Points Out Imperative Need for Change in Present Legal and Charity Systems.

A change in our legal system must be made which will take account of the complex life of the present as against the old-fashioned form of living, which brought with it temptation, greed and jealousy.

The creation of beggars has never been due to the exercise of kindness. All beggars are made, more or less, by the charity system.

Geographers to Be Busy. A very broad program of activities has been outlined for the present year for the new department of exploration and research which has been recently organized in connection with the American Geographical Society.

Small Boats for Submarine. A short time ago a man was landed on the Irish coast from a German submarine. The man was arrested by British officers and the boat in which he had reached the coast was seized.

Evading Reproof. "You seem to think reproof is better than what you get at home," "No," replied the man who had been to his habit.

The Important Knowledge. "Aren't you afraid your son's education will suffer?" "No," replied Mrs. Cornetson.

Spotting Bones. "It is human nature to admire anything that surpasses all else of its kind."
