St. Roch, the Universal Protector Against Contagious Diseases--Prayer for Times of Pestilence. (Catholic Columbian.)

Belief in the intercession of the saints has always been taught in the Church, and the faithful have ever been encouraged to pray to them for assistance, especially in times of sore distress.

The faith and piety of the people in all ages have prompted them to have recourse to these special friends of God for cure or alleviation of certain ills or afflictions. During the present epidemic we naturally turn to the saint whose intercession has been so powerful and efficacious under similar conditions--Saint Roch. Dom Gueranger, in his wonderful work entitled "The Liturgical Year," published in 1867, precludes the sketch of the saint in words that well apply to our own times:

"Three days of famine, three months of defeats, three years of pestilence: the choice given to the guilty David between those three measures of expiation, shows them to be equivalent before the justice of God. The terrible scourge, which makes more havoc in three days than would famine or a disastrous war in months and years, showed in the fourteenth century that it kept its sad pre-eminence: the Black Death covered the world with a mantle of mourning and robbed it of a third of its inhabitants."

"Doubtless the world had never so well merited the terrible warning; the graces of sanctity poured in profusion on the preceding century had but checked for a while the defection of the nations; every embankment being now broken down, entrance was given to the irresistible tide of schism, reform and revolution by which the world must die. Nevertheless God has mercy as long as life lasts and while striking sinful mankind. He gave them at the same time the saint predestined to appease His vengeance."

"At his birth he appeared marked with the cross. When a young man he distributed his goods to the poor, and, leaving his family and country, became a pilgrim for Christ's sake. Leaving his native city--Montpellier, France--and going to Italy to visit the sanctuaries, he there found the cities devastated by a terrible plague. Roch took up his abode among the dead and dying, burying the former and healing the latter with the sign of the cross. Himself stricken with the evil, he hid himself so as to suffer alone, and a dog brought him food. When, cured by God, he returned to Montpellier it was only to be seized as a spy and thrown into prison, where after five years he died. Such are Thy dealings with Thy elect, O Wisdom of God! But no sooner was he dead than prodigies burst forth, making known his origin and history, revealing the power he still enjoyed by delivering from pestilence those who had recourse to him."

"The reputation of his influence, increased by fresh benefits at each visitation of plague, caused his cultus to become popular."

"It is said that devotion to him was greatly increased at the Council of Constance when, in order to avert the pestilence, raging at that time, the image of Saint Roch was, with the approbation of the Bishops, carried solemnly through that town followed by all the people. Thus devotion to the saint has spread in a wonderful way, through the whole world, and he has been piously declared the universal protector against contagious diseases. His feast is observed in the Church on August 16. The prayer recited by the Church on that day, and which is recommended to be said often by the faithful in times of pestilence, is as follows:

"We Beseech Thee, O Lord, protect Thy people in Thy unceasing goodness and through the merits of Blessed Roch, preserve them from every contagion of soul and body. Through Christ our Lord. Amen."

GREATEST DANGER FOLLOWS GRIP

Weakened Victims Fall Easy Prey To Other Diseases

The getting-well stage of grip, pneumonia or other illness is the most dangerous of all because the body, weakened by the disease, is wide open to attacks of other lurking germs. That is why all the organs of the body must be kept in their best working order, not only to drive out the poison left by the disease, but that the patient shall regain strength as soon as possible to avoid further attacks resulting from the poisons in the system.

As a means toward good health after any illness, Father John's Medicine builds up the body because it is all pure wholesome nourishment and free from opium, morphine, chloroform or other poisonous drugs or alcohol. Father John's Medicine has had 60 years' success for colds and throat troubles, coughs and sore throats, and as a tonic and body builder.

Proof--

"After an attack of pneumonia the doctor ordered me to give my baby Father John's Medicine and as a result he regained health and strength. I always give it to my children whenever they catch cold. I am writing this to tell you how grateful I am to Father John's Medicine." (Signed) Mrs. Geo. Hunzberger, 1054 Pike St., Reading, Pa. Because of its body-building, strength-giving food value, Father John's Medicine is an ideal family medicine for all who are weak and run-down.
