

FURS, SATIN AND SOFT FELT HATS

Ermine, Moleskin, White Fox and Kolinsky to Be Worn This Summer.

NEW EARLY SPRING COSTUME

Material of Slate-Gray Cashmere de Soie; Trimming of Bands of Coarse Black Fllet Net Embroidered in Wool.

Recently, writes a Paris fashion correspondent, I witnessed an amusing little scene in which a famous London beauty played the leading role. The background was one of the big department stores on the Boulevard Hausmann, and the beauty was none other than Lady Diana Manners, daughter of the duchess of Rutland. I noticed a considerable crowd of women and girls at the untrammelled hat department. This was nothing new, for nowadays every department of every big store in Paris is crowded, but it struck me that instead of searching for becoming hat shapes for themselves these eager girls and women were watching someone else making a choice.

I made my way to the scene of action and there standing before a looking glass, I found a very tall, thin English girl with wonderful golden hair, starry blue eyes and bluish cheeks. She was actually making a restaurant hat before the eyes of those amazed onlookers.

With absolute unconcern she pulled on a transparent brim made of black tulle and then added a full crown of glittering gold tissue. Then she pushed into place a cluster of metallic flowers and a Louis XV bow of black velvet, gave the whole thing a final pull to make it fit well down on her lovely hair and indicated to the speechless shop girl that she wished the hat made "like that." It was the prettiest sight you can imagine.

A really beautiful girl displaying a wonderful cleverness in the arrangement of fragile materials, above all, the essentially English disregard for the crowd of onlookers.

All for Picturesque Dressing. Lady Diana was—as usual—dressed picturesquely. All the duchess of Rutland's daughters have inherited their mother's genius where clothes are concerned. It will be remembered that when the duchess was Lady Granby she led a very exclusive circle, in London, who called themselves "The Souls." All the members of this circle went in for picturesque dressing and the duchess of Rutland is still famous for her clever arrangements of gorgeous broades, lengths of rich fur and priceless laces.

The day I saw Lady Diana she was wearing a simple one-piece frock, made of navy blue serge, which had a narrow belt of scarlet patent leather. Thrust into this belt were two long, white suede gloves and a magnificent red rose.

Her wrap, which was thrown carelessly back on her shoulders, was made of black poul de sole and fashioned like an Irish peasant's cloak, with a plain round yoke into which the rest of the cloak was gathered. The mantle was lined with bishop's purple crepe de chine and topped with a supple collar of kolinsky. The cloak was tied round Lady Diana's really lovely throat with wide, black silk ribbons and when the moment came for taking off the recently "created" hat and putting on one she had worn on entering the establishment I found that the latter took the form of a fisherman's cap, made of scarlet silk tulle, with quaint black and blue embroideries round the peaked crown.

I have sketched this highly original cap for the benefit of fashion's readers. They will see that it is charmingly becoming and youthful.

Cap Well Drawn on Head. In some mysterious way the peaked crown was invisibly supported, but the cap was so well drawn on the head that it did not need any hatpins. The duchess of Rutland was an amused spectator of the hat-making episode. She also wore a black cloak, and a black charmeuse dress with a single string of magnificent pearls caught in by a diamond brooch.

The full-length figure sketched shows one of Redfern's new models for early spring wear. The material was slate-gray cashmere de sole and the trimming consisted of bands—wide and narrow—of coarse black fllet net embroidered in white wools.

This is one of Redfern's newest ideas and a very effective one; the heavy white wool embroideries look splendid on the coarse black net ground and it is a style of trimming which can be introduced on almost any material. It looks particularly well on black satin or on raven's-wing-blue cloth. The outline of the coat is novel and becoming. It is quite long, reaching well below the knees.

Then in front there is a straight plastron which seems to tie round the waist. As a matter of fact, this plastron is part of the coat itself and the whole thing fastens invisibly at the left side. Redfern is showing a good many spring coats of this length and they are having much success. The accompanying skirt is short and tight and the ensemble is exceedingly chic and smart. The hat shown in this drawing is a new model by Reboux. The brim is longer in front than at the back and the crown is high and full.

Style Popular in Paris. A loosely curled feather is laid round one side, with a fascinating tip drooping over the brim in tassel fashion. Please note the round-cut neck of the coat. This is the style now most popular in Paris, for coats as well as for dresses and blouses. Several of our leading dressmakers are trying to make high, tight collars popular—for coats and dresses, but the Parisiennes are holding away from this innovation, except in the matter of wrap coats.

All the same we shall certainly see something like a revival of high dress collars this spring. Whether this fashion will quickly become generally popular remains to be proved.

I have lately noticed a great many ostrich feathers introduced on velvet and felt hats. Some of these are of the loose uncurled order, but others are really handsome specimens of the feather tribe. I have also seen clusters of ostrich tips used as trimmings for high Russian toques. This is a revival of an old and very popular fashion.

Black satin and soft felt hats will be "the correct thing" all through the spring and summer. The most fashionable milliner in Paris recently told me that soft felt hats will be very much worn this coming summer in conjunction with the most fragile dresses and rich "summer furs."

This indicates that we are in for a picturesque summer season, and that is good news. Summer furs are certain to be more worn than ever; such furs as ermine, moleskin, white fox and kolinsky—the latter in the form of square collars for coats made of pale-hued satins.

Forty-Two Standard Colors. The Textile Color Card association announced the issuance of a card of 42 standard colors for the manufacture of fall fabrics, the majority making their appearance for the first time. A departure was the inclusion of ten colors in wool, the association's efforts formerly having been devoted exclusively to the silk trade. Nut and eik brown, and trooper blue were said to be striking features of the wool tones. Of the silk colors, it was stated, blues predominate, led by the introduction of novelties named Louvain, Bruges and Ghent, while peanut and belt brown; "representing light and fire" and burnt orange were given special mention.

Red Straw and Dresden Silk. Large hats will as usual be the fore for dressy wear. In small hats, one style has a red Java straw brim with the crown in the same shade of silk in a dresden pattern. The trimming is a feather mount. Matrons' hats are in most cases small and high this year. One sees some delightful stylish models in black lisse with high tulle and osprey trimming. Wing effects are also seen on many of these hats for elderly women.

Governor Smith announced that he had signed the Boylston bill making the governor the adjutant general, and chief of the bureau of war records' board to provide a service ribbon and honor medals for soldiers of the army who served in the United States forces in the world war. The blue sky law will introduced by Senator Black was favorably reported by the senate committee on banks and was advanced to the order of final passage. The measure is designed to protect investors by requiring the holding by all state superintendents of banks of all dealers in stocks, bonds and other securities. The state prison commission, at its meeting in Albany, took action to establish new industries to manufacture automobile license plates and similar accessories in two of the state's penal institutions, in accordance with the plan contained in the Waters-Sweet bill appropriating $15,000 for expenses which now is before the legislature. The sum $15,122 has been set aside by the state highway department for maintenance of roads in Livingston county this year. This amount is the second largest appropriated to the six counties comprising the seventh highway division. Amounts appropriated to other counties are: Monroe, $111,000; Ontario, $122,775; Genesee, $99,697; Orleans, $32,941; Wyoming, $32,122. Governor Smith sent to the senate the nomination of Mrs. Frances Stanton Smith of Buffalo, wife of former Congressman Charles Bennett Smith, to be a member of the state civil service commission. The nomination is to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Willard D. McKinstry of Watertown. The appointment is for a six-year term and the salary is $7,100 year, with allowances for traveling expenses. Asserting that foreign language speaking residents of the state have been swindled out of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of Liberty bonds, the state industrial commission announced a "keep your bond campaign" to open in centers which have large foreign populations. Mass meetings will be held in schools and theaters in New York city, Buffalo, Schenectady, Troy, Rome, Saratoga, Niagara Falls and Niagara. The Association Opposed to Impersonation Prohibition filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. Purpose of the association was represented as being to collect, distribute and disseminate information regarding the political, social and economic effect of prohibition of the use of alcoholic beverages, to promote temperance in the use of them and to oppose any movement to limit or continue the use of tobacco. The Pike cheese factory has opened again after being closed all winter. Mr. Perry will receive $125 per hundred pounds for making cheese. The senate by a vote of 49 to 21 passed the Marshall-Cheney bill transferring judicial power on state banks to administer estates and trust funds, a power now possessed by national banks and trust companies. The measure now goes to the governor.

Employees of the Lockport Post company at Newfane have been informed that the local mills may be abandoned and a plant built in Lockport. About 100 Newfane people would be affected. The Adler bill to provide equal representation of employers and employees on the state industrial commission passed the senate. It was opposed by the Democrats. The bill now goes to the governor. The state senate unanimously confirmed Governor Smith's nomination of Mrs. Mary M. Glynn as a member of the state board of charities. Mrs. Glynn is the wife of former Governor Glynn of Albany. The Adler bill to provide for equal representation of employers and employees on the state industrial commission has passed the senate. It was opposed by the Democrats. The bill now goes to the governor. The Donohue bill to appropriate $50,000 for the establishment of state employment offices to meet the emergency created by the curtailment of the federal employment service has been passed by the New York assembly.

The senate, without a dissenting vote, passed the Lusk bill authorizing the establishment of industrial aid bureaus by municipalities and the furnishing of assistance to unemployed during the war readjustment period. It now goes to the governor. Federal District Attorney Dennis B. Lucy has started an investigation into the alleged forcible eviction of Mrs. Mary Knox, aged 68, from a cabin which she had occupied on the Onondaga reservation, near Syracuse, for 48 years, by a band of Indians. Fruit growers fear that the peach crop in the vicinity of Kradonia, which promised to be large, was ruined on account of the low temperature last week. Some growers were sure that the buds had started to such an extent that the crop would be a niter crop.
