HER MISTAKE

By MILDRED WHITE

(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union)

Janey sat a long while with the letter in her hand. In fancy she was going over that long blissful time since she had met Robert...

But after Robert's advent, unrest had stirred within her...

It had never been her opportunity to hear at first hand of remote wonderful parts of the world...

"I want to go to the city," she confided to her new friend.

"Clothes you mean?" Robert Tabor had asked, amused.

The aunt, much persuaded, arranged with an old friend in the city to have Janey visit her there...

"Oh how I love it all!" she said. Home seemed very dull afterward.

With the harvest moon looking down upon them, glorifying their radiant faces—Robert had asked Janey to marry him and she had consented.

Robert wanted her, he longed for her and despotic business held him tied in the city.

In a fever of joyful anticipation Janey rushed to her aunt's room to begin preparation. Robert was pale and worried looking when he met her at the station.

At the hotel dinner, smiling into her lover's eyes across the roses heaped between them, Janey saw a shadow there.

"You like all this, don't you?" Robert asked.

"So much," she agreed, ever eager to please.

Fullly she asked herself each night in what she had failed her fiance seemed to grow more distinctly absorbed.

Suddenly Janey longed with homesick yearning for the restful atmosphere of the country she knew...

"You like all this, don't you?" Robert asked.

"So much," she agreed, ever eager to please.

"I don't seem to fit in Robert," she said, "no matter how hard I try. I'm a disappointment to you, I feel it."

"Take me back to the quiet place that I best know, and leave me there."

Unbelieving, her lover stared into her face.

"But you used to tell me," he said "that you loved for the life of a city!"

"That is why, after I had bought the farm, intending to make it my headquarters, that I returned again to the business world, for your sake, Janey, because you said you loved gayety."

"Why Robert," she said, "it will be just like going straight back to Paradise."

WAS ONE GOLD WATCH AHEAD

Incident in Lord Macaulay's Life Which Probably He Was Quite Willing to Forget.

Here is an amusing story of Macaulay, as told by Lady Logan in her reminiscences:

"Lord Macaulay was in Rome the winter we were there with the maharajah. They had one very good story about him going the rounds of the English colony...

"Promising that other criminals might be about, the Englishman at once returned to his hotel, to find, to his surprise, his own watch ticking comfortably on his dressing table and a strange gold watch in his waistcoat pocket."

Horror! At his first successful coup as a footpad, he hurried off to the bureau de police to give up his booty...

"Savory salads which have some olivine aroma and seasoning which adds to their charm and is hard to define, makes such a dish 'something different.'"

"One must follow a few fundamental principles in cooking, and after that let the imagination run."

"OLD DUFFER" WAS ADMITTED

Distinguished Citizen, Wanting to See Horace Greeley, Irreverently Announced by Office Boy.

A citizen of Waterbury wrote a letter to the Republican of that city a day or two ago asking for information about Horace Greeley...

That he wished to learn more about the great journalist does him credit, but we are surprised there is a man in Waterbury capable of writing letters to newspapers who didn't know about Mr. Greeley already.

This reminds me of a story told by the late Charles A. Dana. One day while Mr. Greeley was reigning as editor of the Tribune...

He was particularly busy, and gave explicit orders to his office boy not to admit anybody to his room.

Later on the office boy announced to Mr. Greeley there was an "old duffer" outside clamoring for an interview with the editor.

Mr. Greeley asked the boy who it was, to which the boy replied he didn't know, but that he wore a soiled linen duster, carried a carpet-bag of the early seventies type...

The boy went back and returned in a few minutes bringing the information that the "old duffer" was Henry Wilson of Boston who happened at that time to be the vice president of the United States.

He saw Mr. Greeley.—Hartford Courant.

Golf Will Survive

It has been held in some expert circles that golf never could become the game baseball is, because golf lacks a picturesque language.

This view overlooks the fact that baseball acquired its language by slow degrees, and only reached its present perfection through the long labors of devoted philologists and etymologists.

The language grew, like love, by what it fed on.

Golf and the sport writers lime and they will produce a language for that game as copious, refulgent, and learned as now distinguishes the more popular game.

Already we detect the beginnings. We read of Mr. Bockenkamp's play Thursday, that by "sinking a horriblizing putt of 46 feet" he finished 6 up.

We have heard of 45-foot putts before, but it must be admitted it adds to the wonderment of one to know that it was horriblizing. This is an encouraging beginning and convinces us that golf is going to survive.—Kansas City Star.

Queer Coincidence

One of a party whereof Charles Darwin was a member was speaking of the earthquake of Tacahusano, in northern Chile, on which occasion the father had lost all his property...

"But you used to tell me," he said "that you loved for the life of a city!"

"That is why, after I had bought the farm, intending to make it my headquarters, that I returned again to the business world, for your sake, Janey, because you said you loved gayety."

ORIGINAL DESIGNS IN COOKERY

To the artist cook who really enjoys mixing ingredients, as a painter does his colors, there is no limit to the tasty, delightful dishes which one may originate.

Large upon, with the materials at hand. Take for instance a steamed plum pudding. A piece of corn bread, a half a cupful of cooked apples, a few bread crumbs, a cupful of left-over cocoa and a few raisins with two egg yolks left from a frosting or dessert will make a most tasty pudding.

After some experience in handling foods one may concoct toothsome dishes of his left-over. It is not always wise to sell all one knows as to a dish, for some conscientious objectors will refuse to even try a make-over of rearranged food.

Savory salads which have some olivine aroma and seasoning which adds to their charm and is hard to define, makes such a dish 'something different.'"

"One must follow a few fundamental principles in cooking, and after that let the imagination run."

"The cook who wastes nothing, but at the same time serves her food in a dainty, tasty and appetizing manner, is a real genius, and her talents are in constant demand."

Do you throw away the half-cupful of coffee or more of melted ice cream that might make a pudding for the next day or be used in a cake, adding less sugar?

Handwich filling and salad make a wide field for original designs, as well as flour mixtures.

The woman who discovered that a sponge cake could be made most fetching by adding the yolks whisked one at a time, and not stirring them very freely, had a cake that attracted much comment because of its streaked gold-and-white appearance.

Accident often is the mother of new things, but the housewife who is looking for new and pleasing ideas find them all the while.

The art of cooking cannot be learned out of a book any more than the art of swimming or the art of painting. The best teacher is practice; the best guide sentiment (providing you have salt).

FOOD COMBINATIONS

There is no law which governs the foods that go well together, for of every kind of food served dependent upon whether it is an animal or a vegetable.

The taste of the food determines the food combination. It is a matter which is both science and art.

We may combine a hard-boiled egg with a slice of bread, but we cannot combine that where fire or heat are concerned. They digest better and are better kept to keep up the body activities.

Treat the body as a well regulated machine which is fed at intervals. Stuffing with the day's allowance will choke the fire, allowing the food to be digested and assimilated. The choice and care of food.

If we overeat we waste most of the food and overwork the stomach; if we under-eat, we weaken the stomach and give off heat or supply energy.

The three food principles which supply the body in the best possible manner are protein, meat, fish, eggs and milk fats which are obtained from butter, cream and milk, carbohydrates of sugars and starches, and fats of oils and butter.

Generated by potatoes, rice and corn. To see that these three foods are included in each meal we have what is called a well-balanced meal. If they are served in good proportions, they will give us good health.

In each meal we have another responsibility to see that some of each of iron, phosphorus and calcium are given as well as some which furnish the roughage or ballast necessary to give bulk to the food.

Fruits which furnish the appetite are made firm, as fresh fruit for breakfast, and sweets are used as a snack, or dessert, as sugar dulls the appetite. Good reason for having giving ourselves sweets just before a meal, a practice far too common among mothers.

Some people are sensitive to certain foods or combinations which they do not enjoy with comfort; this is owing to some peculiarity of the body mechanism. Of course these things should be avoided. Happy the man and woman who is normal and is able to eat, digest, assimilate and enjoy all the things provided by our all-wise Creator.
