SEES BIG TASKS IN PEACE PLANS OF RED CROSS

Ethan Allen, Division Manager, Returning From Europe, Describes Future Work.

Any impression that the American Red Cross, having finished its war task, is going back to the status it occupied before the war is dissipated by the announcement by Ethan Allen, manager of the Atlantic Division of the Red Cross, that the organization is buckling down to a most strenuous peace program of permanent activities at home.

Mr Allen has just returned from a trip to England and France, and brings back with him first hand information about the work of the American Red Cross in the field and the plans of the League of Red Cross Societies for the development and co ordination of humanitarian effort throughout the world.

"A most strenuous task is ahead for the Red Cross in America," said Mr. Allen. "In community work, in recreational activities, in the hospitals operated by the United States Public Health Service, in home service work for the benefit of needy and suffering civilian families, in nursing and in Junior Red Cross work in the schools, the American Red Cross will yield the best that it can offer.

"The health work alone is an immense undertaking. An enormous toll is claimed each year by preventible diseases. Each year, in giving birth to babies, 16,000 mothers die. Then there are the diseases which work havoc among children and there is the lack of proper care which results in undernourishment and underdevelopment. The work of the Red Cross not only will contribute to building up the lives of these children and safeguarding the health and strength of American mothers but it also will do much toward the happiness of American homes.

Home Service Comprehensive.

"From platforms of Chautauqua circuits, Red Cross nurses now are urging communities to take up public health work in order that these communities may be equipped to combat diseases and epidemics such as the "Flu," and that they may be able to enforce every precaution particularly in cases of contagious diseases. The importance of this can easily be seen when it is known that diphtheria alone killed 15,000 children in 1918.

"The home service plans of the Red Cross are especially comprehensive. It has been decided not only fully to discharge the pledges of the Red Cross to dependent families of soldiers and sailors who served in the war, but to extend this helpful agency to communities which are not yet awake to their social needs and social obligations. Part of Red Cross Chapter funds will be available for assisting families who are finding the burden of living too heavy for them to carry unassisted.

"With the close of the vacation period children in American schools will take up Red Cross activities with redoubled energy. These children are to raise a national fund of $1,000,000, sixty per cent. of which will be used in helping destitute children abroad. The remainder of the fund will support the Red Cross activities in the schools here. There will be work on garment production, first aid classes, manufacturing canes for war cripples and materials for hospitals, knitting and cooking. In addition, every effort will be made to inculcate health habits in the children."

Spirit of Unselfishness

Mr. Allen spoke of the great importance to the world of the formation of the League of Red Cross Societies which was completed while he was abroad.

"In my talks with the men who played a leading part in the establishment of this league, I noted, above all, a spirit of unselfish devotion to the cause of humanity," he said.

Success and Failure.

The secret of real success is this: If you have lived such a life that you can say: "I have never done any man an injury." If you can say of your enemies: "I freely forgive them of the injuries they have done me, and pity them for having done so," and if you can rejoice in the fact that you are not like them; if you can sleep all night the sound sleep of a clear conscience, and rejoice in the knowledge that you possess a conscience; if you possess a tender heart that can move you to tears of sympathy for the stricken one and a nature given to lending of a helping hand to such stricken ones, and if, when you come to that time when "The cruel master death seals the eyes and steals thy breath," and can calmly face that moment without fear, with a full knowledge of a "well done" at the end, then you are a success, otherwise, no matter what your station in life may be you are a failure.

Wireless Waves and Fire.

At first thought it seems highly improbable that any fire could be ascribed to the effect of wireless waves, though it is conceivable that, granted certain especially favorable conditions, the kindling of a spark between adjacent metal parts might have such effect. M Le Roy, in a recent issue of the Comptes Rendus, describes experiments intended to test this point. He had met with several cases in which fires did appear to have been caused by wireless waves. Accordingly, he constructed an "inflammable resonator," by the aid of which he did succeed in setting fire to paper, cotton wadding and other substances. He thinks it possible that in certain conditions inflammable substances such as bales of cotton bound with hoop iron, could be set on fire by wireless means.—Dallas News.

Origin of Family Names.

That the origin of family names can be readily traced is shown by a recent book published by an English scholar, in which he has successfully traced more than 6,000 names. He reaches the conclusion that fully half of them are based on occupation or locality. Thus, "Crook" more likely became the name of a man who lived near the bend of a river rather than a person of crooked body or morals. Also "Wilder" meant not a wild man, but one who lived in the wilderness. Such names as Bishop, Pope, Priest, Lord and other religious terms are derived from names that characters bore in the old church festivals and pageants. Long after the Norman conquest the baptismal name was, strictly speaking, the only true name.

"And the Goose Hangs High."

The most popular explanation of the origin of the expression, "Everything is lovely and the goose hangs high," is this: That it comes from the southern country amusement known as "goose pulling." A goose its neck carefully plucked and well greased, was hung by its feet to a branch of a tree. The men would ride past at a gallop, trying to catch it by the neck and pull its head off. The better the goose was in dodging the greater the fun. When the goose hung high so that the competitors had to stand in their stirrups to grasp it, the joy was the greatest. Another suggested origin is that it refers to the fact that wild geese fly in clear weather; this explanation would change "hangs" to "honks."

Eastern English.

A volume might be collected of innocent but barbarous perversions of the English language. The latest comes from the projectors of a new Siamese newspaper, who have distributed the following notice: "The news of English we tell the latest. Writ in perfectly style and most earliest. Do a murder git commit, we hear of it and tell it. Do a mighty chief die, we publish it, and in borders of somber. Staff has each one been college and write like Kipling and the Dickens. We circle every town and extortionate not for advertisements. Buy it. Tell each of you its greatness for good. Ready on Friday, Number one."

Lithuanian Courtships.

There are no June brides in Lithuania, for during that month the maid is too busy in her garden and the man in his fields. No time can be spared for courtship or marriage during the spring or summer or autumn. But in the winter, when the harvests are stored away and when the maidens have long evenings in which to sit by the fire and spin and weave their lovely linen and woolen cloths, singing all the while, the young men call their match-making friends and the short courtship takes place.

His Solution.

They were all crying at once, two girls and a boy. Mother was trying to mix her bread. "Eddie," she said to the little boy, "what would you do if you were poor mamma and had three crying babies and your work to do, too?" "Well," he said, judiciously, "if I was you I would frow bofe the dirls out the window and rock the boy to sleep."

Hermits in Italy.

There are still hermits in Italy who live solitary lives in mountain caves, and they number no fewer than 900. Among these recluses there are sixteen who are over ninety-five years of age and three centenarians, while all the others have passed the age of fifty.
