Duncan Dancers and Copeland at Convention Hall Next Wednesday Evening

The novel "illustrated concert recital" by George Copeland, pianist, and the six Duncan Dancers, presents features so extraordinary and so different from those of any other musical offering that detailed account of it is distinctly deserved.

In the program arranged for, in their appearance at Convention Hall on next Wednesday evening are numbers by Gluck, Chopin, Schubert and other great composers. It is an attraction of the highest artistic merit and remarkable for its astonishing grace and beauty. The Dancers express by pose and gesture the moods of the composers. Their interpretations have been carefully prepared and they come before great audiences in every large city with the serene poise and grace of Greek statuary, awakened suddenly to life by the strains of masterly music. The dancers in pairs, or singly, or in ensemble, visualize the moods of the music supplied by the consummate art of Mr. Copeland.

This concert will be the first of the Raymond series.
